COMMITTEES AIM TO VISIT EVERY VOTER

School Groups Gather Tonight to Seek Support for $550,000 Issue.

HEAR PROGRAM OUTLINED

Building Plans to Be Explained at P. T. A. Meetings at 12 City Schools.

Plans for a city-wide, house-to-house campaign in behalf of the proposed $550,000 bond issue for a school building program in Mansfield will be mapped tonight by the Mansfield P. T. A. council and P. T. A. committees at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce.

The bond issue will be submitted to the voters at the Aug. 9 primary election and, if successful, will provide the funds for a $1,000,000 building program. The rest would come from a PWA grant.

Scheduled for 7:30 p. m., tonight's meeting was called by Mrs. F. D. Boals, president of the P. T. A. council.

Needs 65 Per Cent Vote.

Committee members representing each of the 13 P. T. A. organizations in the city have been invited to the session to hear plans for the drive to put the bond issue over in August. The proposal requires a 65 per cent majority.

P. T. A. officials said lists of voters in each of the city school areas are being compiled and that each voter will be visited by a schools representative and urged to support the bond issue.

Motion pictures of the John Simpson and Hedges Junior high schools, showing crowded conditions in the schools, will be shown at tonight's meeting, Supt. W. L. Miller said.

Calls for 2 New Schools.

The building program calls for a new building to replace the John Simpson school and a second new structure at Wood street and Cline avenue.

Supt. W. L. Miller released a

NOMINATE TODAY

Indiana Dems Expected to Choose Van Nuys Again.

INDIANAPOLIS —(AP)—Indiana Democrats, who made peace with a lukewarm New Dealer in order that they might solidify party ranks to boom U. S. Philippine High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt as a presidential possibility in 1940, were expected to renominate by convention acclamation today U. S. Sen. Frederick Van Nuys.

The last obstacle in Van Nuys' path was removed as Alex Gordon, Indianapolis labor leader, withdrew as a candidate to insure "complete harmony" within the Democratic ranks. Other announced candidates for the nomination had withdrawn previously.

Van Nuys had threatened to run as an independent because, he said, the governor had tried to "read him out" of the Democratic party in an address to party editors last summer.

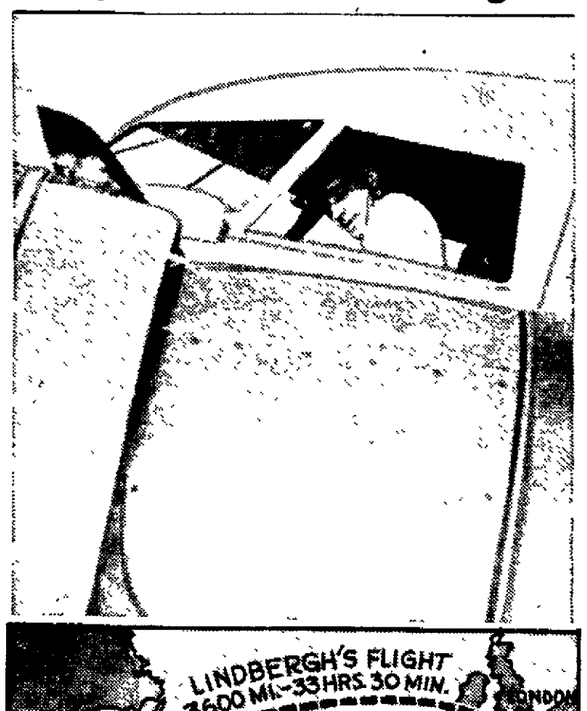
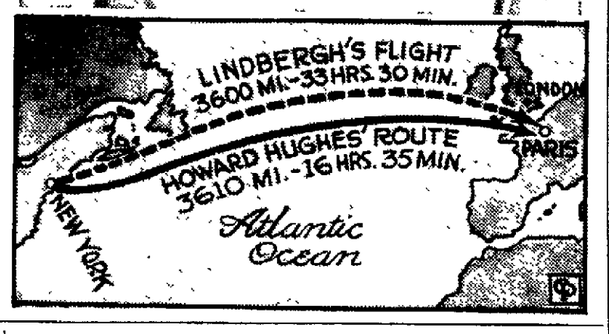
Hughes Welcomed in France - - at Controls of Ship - - Route of His Flight





Roaring onward in his round-the-world flight, Howard Hughes and his four flying companions were over Siberia today, having dropped in on Moscow, and taken off as quickly. While Hughes was winging his way eastward by plane, the picture at the top left was being rushed westward, via radiophoto. It shows Hughes being welcomed at LeBourget Field, Paris, yesterday afternoon, by the airport commandant, M. Girardot, left, and United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt, right. Hughes is shown in the center.

Producers Back Milk Ordinance After Stormy 3-Hour Session

The Richland County Milk Producers association settled an intra-organization wrangle last night by voting to comply with the Mansfield health board's milk ordinance after a stormy three-hour session at the courthouse.

The compliance motion, made by Edward Pritchard, Monroe township, was passed without a dissenting vote, but about one-fourth of the approximately 150 members of the session, refused to participate in the balloting.

Climaxing a wrangle that began in April after the city health board's milk ordinance was placed in effect, the meeting brought out charges against officers of the organization that they failed to back up its members because they declined to start court action against the health board to halt enforcement of sanitation ordinance.

Protesting members of the association argued that they could not improve their farms to comply with the ordinance at prices they are receiving for their raw milk.

After the meeting, about 15 producers, most of them in the northern part of the county, said they would take their milk out of the Mansfield market and sell it to a Cleveland distributor.

The protesting group was headed by Charles Pittenger of near Shelby, who said the county producers association failed to support producers in their battle against the milk ordinance although they paid their dues regularly.

Clarence Mowry, president of the association who presided at the meeting pointed out that the organization had repeatedly helped producers to protect their milk prices, but it was not in a position to battle the health board

MORE HEAT DUE

Mercury Hits 83; Wednesday to Be 'Warmer.'

Get ready for more heat.

That was the weatherman's warning today, as the mercury bubbled upward in the thermometer tubes, reaching 83 at noon the same as at the same time yesterday. Monday's high was 89.

The forecast said "generally fair tonight, slightly warmer Wednesday. No one would have argued with the statement's accuracy if the word "hotter" had been substituted for "warmer."

Yesterday's high in Mansfield was 89, according to Observer Otto Sprunger, while Columbus had an official 94, and seemed due for even hotter weather today. Portsmouth reported 97 yesterday, and Ironton had 96.

The highest for the year in Mansfield is 92, recorded last Friday.

Westinghouse Lands Order For 25,000 Irons, Largest In Years

The Mansfield plant of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company today announced the receipt of an order for 25,000 electric irons, the largest single iron order it has received in the past four years.

The order was placed by the Consolidated Edison company of New York, and was viewed by Westinghouse officials as a definite indication of brighter business conditions. The New York company plans to open an intensive appliance sales drive this fall.

Westinghouse officials also said they were hopeful that the same company would place one and possibly two similar orders, in the event business conditions show evidence of improvement.

The 25,000-iron order will make 40,000 man-hours of work in the Mansfield plant, officials said, and work on the order will start the second week in August, with a production of 5,000 irons a week scheduled.

Commenting on the order, A. E. Allen, vice president of Westinghouse, said today, "Consolidated Edison is to be congratulated for its faith and courage in launching a great business campaign in the face of current conditions. It is one of the most concrete gestures any agency can make to pull business out of the doldrums. Consolidated Edison is taking steps literally to buy and sell its way to a more prosperous position."

Allen pointed out that in addition to the 40,000 man hours of work the order will create in the Mansfield plant, there would also be 25,000 more hours of work created for companies supplying material to Westinghouse.

"Other additional business has made it possible for us to increase du Pont, Raskob Accused of Evading $1,000,000 Tax.

HIT BY FINDING

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The United States board of tax appeals found today that Pierre S. du Pont and John J. Raskob had attempted to evade more than $1,000,000 of income taxes by "paper transactions" in securities.

The exact amount of additional taxes due on their 1929 incomes was left by the board to be determined later, but attorneys estimated Raskob might be held to owe about $1,000,000 and du Pont about $600,000.

After the 1929 stock market crash, du Pont and Raskob sold about $4,500,000 of securities to each other at prices far below what they had paid for them. Eventually they resold the securities to each other so each wound up with his original holdings.

White Ready To Reply On Bulkley 'Pat'

Talks at Fremont, Davey and Sawyer to Be on Same Platform.

(By International News Service)

FREMONT—Democrats in this sector were to gather tonight for a huge rally billed as potentially filled with political fireworks.

Of prime interest was the scheduled address of former Governor George White who has declared he will express himself on President Roosevelt's left handed endorsement of U. S. Senator Robert J Bulkley. White's opponent in the primaries, at Marietta last Friday.

Prior to the Marietta celebration, held in White's home town and presided over by him, White told newsmen he did not expect the president to give any open endorsement to Bulkley for re-election.

"If he does," White said, "I can take off my gloves and fight with my bare knuckles."

The former governor's friends said he will tell the rally to be held at the Sandusky county fairgrounds, just how he feels about the president's action in giving Bulkley a "pat on the back" while ignoring White who has declared himself a "friend of the New Deal, but no rubber stamp."

Foes Face Each Other.

The rally will bring together for the first time on a speaking platform, Governor Davey, his opponent in the primaries, Charles Sawyer, of Cincinnati; and his most bitter political enemy, James Metzenbaum, former senator and counsel for the special senate graft investigating committee.

With all three scheduled to speak, it was expected that there would be no pulling of punches. Davey and Metzenbaum, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, have been especially critical of each other.

In an address at Sandusky last night, Davey put to rest rumors of a shakeup in the highway department and lauded his highway director, John Jaster. Speaking on the recent report of his highway investigating board, the governor said the reported existence of collusion in bidding by hot mix contractors was no reflection on the state.

Omsk to Complete 3rd Leg of Round World Speed Flight by Wealthy American.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK —(UP)— Headquarters of the Hughes' 'round the world flight reported today that the millionaire sportsman landed at Omsk, Siberia, at 1 p. m. EST, completing safely the third leg of his speed dash.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. — Howard Hughes, American millionaire flier, sped across the vast expanse of Soviet Russia tonight toward Omsk in western Siberia, where he hoped to land on the third leg of his round the world speed try.

At 4:45 p. m. (8.45 a. m. EST) officials of the Moscow airport reported that Hughes already had covered 720 miles, more than half of the 1,380-mile hop to Omsk, and that he hoped to arrive there before 9 p. m. (1 p. m., EST).

The big monoplane crossed the Volga river at Kazan, more than 400 miles from Moscow, a little more than two hours after the takeoff.

Hughes and his four companions took off in their sleek silver monoplane from Moscow's central airport at 1:25 p. m. (5:25 a. m. EST) today two hours and 12 minutes after they arrived from Paris.

They had 6,000 miles of Soviet territory ahead of them as their heavily loaded plane sped away on the 1,380-mile hop to Omsk.

They completed the Paris-Moscow flight of 1,541 miles in seven hours and 49 minutes, bringing their plane down at 11:13 a. m. (3:13 a. m., EST).

The fliers, unshaven and their hair tousled, looked tired as they stepped from the plane, but were in grand humor, signing autographs for fans who crowded around them.

Hughes was so preoccupied with problems of the flight that he apparently did not notice that his shirt tail was out.

He eagerly scanned air maps brought out for him by Soviet air-

Ocean-Flying Pioneer Cruises Over City as Hughes Dashes for Moscow

Chamberlin, Who Flew Atlantic After Lindy, Stops In Mansfield.

By JANE WILLIAMS

As the $200,000 plane of Howard Hughes, millionaire flier on a round-the-world flight, winged from Paris toward Moscow last night, a giant plane cruised over Mansfield, piloted by one of the pioneers who blazed the air trail for young Hughes — Clarence Chamberlin.

Chamberlin, who flew across the Atlantic in a single-motored, small horsepower plane two weeks after Lindbergh made aviation history, is now on a barnstorming tour raising funds to finance his experiments with a stratosphere plane.

He arrived in Mansfield late yesterday afternoon and will remain until tomorrow afternoon. He is taking passengers up from Mansfield airport in his trimotored Curtiss Condor, said to be the largest land plane now in service in America. It has a wing spread of 96 feet, and carries 27 passengers

On June 4, 1927, Chamberlin accompanied by his financial backer, Charles Levine, lifted his little Bellanca plane off Floyd Bennett field in New York and headed for Berlin. He ran out of gas 70 miles from the Berlin airport and landed in a field.

But that was 11 years ago, when world flying was in its infancy. Chamberlin, reminiscing today, made some interesting comparisons between then and now which show the development and advancement of aviation in little more than a decade.

"In 1927 my plane, which was one of the best of that day, had

Roosevelt 'Blessing' Gets 1st Test in Oklahoma Today

NEW DEAL TO FIND OUT IF 'BOOSTS' HELP

550,000 Go to Polls Today to Decide Heated Race for Senate Nomination.

(By International News Service)

OKLAHOMA CITY—Providing the first major test for the New Deal since the campaigning President Roosevelt started his current transcontinental tour, voters marched to the polls in Oklahoma today in a bitter primary election that attracted nationwide interest.

A record turnout of more than 550,000 was expected. The weather was fair and warm.

Not only state but national interest centered in the three-cornered fight for the Democratic nomination for the U. S. senate. Seeking the nomination were Sen. Elmer Thomas, "old friend" of the president, Governor E. W. Marland, also a New Deal supporter, and Rep. Gomer Smith, a former vice president of the Townsend Old-Age pension plan.

President Roosevelt stopped in Oklahoma only last Saturday to boost hopes of "my very old friend," Sen. Thomas for renomination. The president said Thomas had been of enormous help to him in advising the administration of Oklahoma's needs at Washington. The president also had a few kind words for Gov. Marland but he did not mention Rep. Smith by name at all.

The primary climaxed one of the most bitter and colorful campaigns in the history of a state noted for its colorful politics.

Resumes Westward Junket.

EN ROUTE WEST WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT—(INS)—President Roosevelt came out of the Panhandle country of Texas today into Colorado, bound for the Pacific coast, still intent upon expounding the philosophy of the New Deal, and still intent upon taking part in this year's Democratic primaries.

He did dip into the Texas primary, which is to be decided on the 23rd, to the extent of endorsing nearly every member of congress for re-election, through whose district he passed.

Moreover, he announced, under dramatic circumstances, the appointment of Gov. James V. Allred, the young governor of the Lone Star state, as a federal judge for the southern district of Texas.

The Texas politicos also liked the rather humorous exchange of telegrams between Mr. Roosevelt and his second in command, Vice President John N. Garner, who decided to continue fishing in his favorite streams of southwest Texas, rather than to come to the Panhandle under blazing heat to welcome Mr. Roosevelt to a state where Democratic presidents seldom come.

RUSH WORK ON RELIEF SYSTEM

Auditor Acts to Place New Needy Aid Program Into Effect; Davey OK's It.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The state auditor's office moved swiftly today to put into effect a new poor relief program that became law with the signing by Gov. Martin L. Davey of measures passed by the recently-adjourned special session of the legislature.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, who with a yet-to-be-appointed director will compose a newly-created state relief administration, said that the machinery would be in full swing by the first of August.

"It will take but little time to get straightened up," he said. "Our first big job will be to investigate all relief cases and eliminate the ineligibles from the rolls."

Governor Davey has not yet indicated whom he will appoint to the $400-a-month post of director, but capital sources said that J. Freer Bittinger of Ashland and Roy L. Wildermuth of Columbus had been mentioned as possibilities. Wildermuth was chairman of the old relief commission that expired in April, 1937, and since has served as a deputy tax commissioner.

The governor approved the relief program, which provides $12,000,000 for the remainder of this year, late yesterday. Of the 10 bills he signed, eight applied to poor aid and public works and the other two set up a state institutional building authority, increased the salaries of state highway patrolmen $5 a month, and provided that highway department laborers be paid flat monthly salaries rather than by the hour.

BUCYRUS—Gordon Harris, 33, a Cleveland Electric company salesman, died in City hospital today of a fractured skull received on June 29 when his auto hit a bridge west of Bucyrus. Orilla Kelly, of Scotia, N. Y., his driving companion, was only slightly injured.

WEIRTON HALTS BUSINESS TO PROTEST LABOR CASE RULING

(By Associated Press)

WEIRTON, W. Va.—Workers and business men of this steel town mobilized today for a "peaceful protest" march against the conduct of the 11-month-old Weirton Steel company case by Labor Board Examiner Edward Grandison Smith.

The residents of Weirton and of adjoining Hollidays Cove adopted without protest last night a resolution calling for the closing of every place of business in the two towns to protest the barring from the hearing of Clyde A. Armstrong, chief company counsel for the subsidiary of E. T. Weir's National Steel corporation.

The ruling by Smith was the climax of frequent and bitter clashes between counsel and the examiner during the long National Labor Relations board case. Weirton Steel—one of those "little steel" firms that has steadfastly refused to bargain with the CIO-affiliated Steel Workers' Organizing committee — is charged with unfair labor practices, including the domination of its employes, in violation of the Wagner act.

As the hearing progressed, it became more tense; once Smith broke his gavel and shattered the glass top of his desk while pounding for order. Last Thursday Armstrong started making an objection to certain testimony. Smith ordered him to "sit down" and Armstrong refused.

Smith, in barring the attorney yesterday, said his behavior was "defiant, contemptuous and contumacious" and that he had failed to show "remorse or repentence."

The workers and business men adopted their resolution at an overflow meeting at Colonial hall, which accommodates 2,000, and decided to march tomorrow to Steubenville, O., across the Ohio river. They agreed to appear at the federal building there, where the hearing is being held, to demand Armstrong's reinstatement.

U. S. CITIZENS REFUSE TO QUIT BESIEGED CITY

10 Americans Remain While Nippon Troops Open Fire on Kuikiang Front.

(By United Press)

SHANGHAI—Japanese advance forces attacked Chinese defenses within a few miles of Kiukiang today to start a battle which military experts believed would seal the fate of Hankow, the provisional capital.

About 10 Americans were in the city, an important Yantgse river port 135 miles below Hankow. They made no attempt to seek refuge aboard the United States gunboat Monocacy which, with the British gunboat Cockhafer, had docked about three miles below the city.

The Chinese government had ordered the Monocacy upriver, but the American officers aboard refused to obey.

Sink Pontoons.

Chinese authorities at Kiukiang ordered the Standard Oil company to sink three of their pontoons on the Yangtse in an effort to prevent Japanese troop landings. Socony employes sank one and later Chinese troops shelled and sank the others.

The United States consulate general will protest the incident and the Standard Oil company will demand indemnity.

Japanese guns on warships between Kiukiang and Hukow, 20 miles down river, were pouring shells into the defenses on the city's outskirts. Chinese reports admitted that the Japanese were within 10 miles of Kiukiang.

Both Chinese and Japanese reports indicated that a spectacular battle was in progress on Poyang lake, southeast of Kiukiang. Japanese airplanes were bombing Chinese gunboats attacking small Japanese boats attempting to land troops on the west shore.

The Japanese boats were endangered because the lake, formerly the Chinese navy's base for mine-laying maneuvers, was filled with mines.

The funds will be allocated by county commissioners to Mansfield, Shelby and the townships with the heaviest relief burden. The bulk of the funds will go to Mansfield and Madison township which have most of the relief cases in the county.

GEN. JOHNSON:

'Sooners' May Not Agree With President But They Understand His Meaning

—By HUGH S. JOHNSON

BETHANY BEACH, Del.—The president did a masterly professional job in Oklahoma. My state likes her politics raw and blistering. With his genius for tuning to popular temper, Mr. Roosevelt served it exactly so. Disagreeing, but being an Oklahoman, the radio thrilled me with a masterpiece of politics, showmanship, and enough stuff on the ball to satisfy the toughest Sooner from the short-grass country and still not demean the official dignity of the speaker.

As Oklahoma colored folks say, he had his fighting "habits" on, and that is when I like him best. But so skillfully was this super-punching done that the press accounts said that he was gentle with senatorial candidate Gomer Smith, didn't take a crack at gubernatorial candidate Alfalfa Bill Murray, and only mildly endorsed the senatorial incumbent — Yes-man Thomas.

No old-time Oklahoman would agree. The president demonstrated that he knows his native Sooner product better. His only burst of true and tumultuous cow-camp applause was when he interpolated extemporaneously that one of the candidates for the Democratic state ticket was nationally known as a Republican. My 83-year-old mother, who pioneered that state since long before its beginning, and knows as much about its politics as anybody, rocked with laughter as this came over the radio and chuckled: "That pinked Bill."

It referred to the fact that Alfalfa Murray, as governor before, in his 1936 bitterness, made the deadly mistake of introducing Alf Landon, who was political poison in Oklahoma.

Old Bill, with my own father, helped organize the Democratic party in Oklahoma. He was responsible as any for the break that nominated Woodrow Wilson. Calling him a Republican is like calling Hamilton Fish a Communist or, for that matter, calling Mr. Roosevelt a Democrat.

But that isn't the point. The point is the amazing dexterity in side-swiping the Democratic candidate for governor in favor of the WPA candidate—Keys—by a deft and deadly punch to the most vulnerable spot in Alfalfa's whole anatomy. The cleverness of that was what brought the old "ki-yi-yip" out of my state-mates, whether they agreed with it or not—and most of them don't.

Another solar-plexis punch was aimed at Gomer Smith—in addition to attributing the Red river dam to Senator Elmer Thomas, when everybody in Oklahoma knows it was Congressman Disney's baby.

In the last senatorial primary, Gomer was a Doc Townsend advocate in a contest of impossible promises with John Lee, who promised "a farm for every farmer and a house for every worker"—the "every man a king" theme of Huey Long. Josh Lee outpromised him, but now Gomer is fighting the president's "old friend," Elmer Thomas. And did Mr. Roosevelt by another anonymous adroitness bat Gomer's ears down? He talked about "people with panaceas" who would "reform the world overnight." That spotted Gomer in the mind of every real Oklahoman. Then Mr. Roosevelt sent over his sizzler. Such people, if not exactly in Theodore Roosevelt's "lunatic fringe," are so close that a slight shock would send them to the nut-house.

Gomer, on this policy, is precisely in the president's beloved Senator Pepper's record and position. He is crazy like a fox. He also is of the red clay of the Sooner state while Elmer is a transplanted and highly perfumed posy which, I think, the old timers are about to pluck.

If memory serves, Teddy's "lunatic fringe" were, in part, people who would cure all ills by printing unlimited worthless money to pay for unlimited governmental spending. That is precisely Elmer's lunatic panacea. If there is a lunatic fringe of panacea-mongers, both Oklahoma senators are far deeper in it than Gomer Smith.

But this isn't a piece in praise of political sanity or honesty—only on political adroitness.

Hollywood Speaks---

By ROBBIN COONS

Robbin Coons, our Hollywood columnist, is in New York to see what movie activities are like in the east.

NEW YORK—The search for a lady who might be called the toast of New York leads to the Ritz Towered retreat of Vera Zorina, sometime and again-to-be of Hollywood.

Miss Zorina (courtesy Sam Goldwyn, as the program note informs) is the classic-featured Norwegian whose performance and dancing grace are such potent attractions in the S. R. O. musical of Rodgers and Hart, "I Married An Angel." In Hollywood she has been seen thus far only in the "Goldwyn Follies," in a role scarcely suggestive of the furore she could create as a romantic comedienne.

Mr. Goldwyn's courtesy recently was extended to permit Zorina's remaining for the run of the play. It was rather a strain on the Goldwyn courtesy to permit her to do the play at all, but Zorina had promised Producer Dwight Wiman long ago when she was in the London cast of "On Your Toes," and to Mr. Goldwyn a promise is a promise—especially when a show looks like a hit. After Sam first pronounced the famous two words ("im-possible") Zorina hopped into a plane, caught Sam in New York, and convinced him it was possible. Sam thought a girl in pictures ought to stay in pictures. If she wanted the stage, she ought to forget pictures.

"But I could not do that," Zorina says. "I want pictures, but I want the stage and dancing too. I could never give up any of them. I want to go on—there is so much I must learn. I must learn to sing. I must develop as an actress. Some day I must play a serious dramatic role. I must keep on with the ballet. I must—"

But right here I must point out a couple of things myself. The first is that Zorina, wearing a slim-waisted blue peasantish frock, her every gesture a poem in grace, is the kind of interview subject who needn't say a thing. You can just sit and look and study—and you get what I mean. The second is that Zorina, at 21, has attained stardom on stage, screen, ballet.

And not by accident. She was dancing when she was three. She was always dancing, always wanted to dance. Little Brigita Hartwig of Kristiansund, Norway, grew up in Berlin, studying dancing and the arts. She became Vera Zorina when she joined the Ballet Russe, wherein a Russion name is always demanded. (But Rodgers and Hart borrowed Brigita for her character name in their musical.)

As if a nightly show and the usual matinees and a morning devoted to ballet study were not enough, Zorina has serious plans for painting and sculpture.

But as a "toast of New York" she is almost naively delighted.

"I have two nice letters from people who want to organize Zorina fan clubs. Isn't that sweet—but what must I do, how should I answer them? I try so hard to answer all who write—I write and write so much that I have no time to write my own family. I am so flattered when my autograph is asked, but I cannot understand this craze for autographs. From the president, and from famous statesmen and writers and musicians, yes—but we who dance and act, we come and go so quickly what will our names be worth a few years from now?"

I couldn't answer that one. But if I collected stage and movie autographs, I'd want Zorina's on past performance and future promise.

COMPARES U. S. AND ENGLISH HOUSING PLANS

British Builder Notes Wide Differences in Standards for Low-Cost Homes.

The type of low-cost housing so popular in England would be difficult to market in America according to Frank Taylor, noted English builder, who outlines the main differences in English and American housing in an article in the Insured Mortgage portfolio, official Federal Housing Administration publication.

A builder of long experience in England, Mr. Taylor is currently developing a low-cost-home project on Long Island, N. Y., and his comparisons of English and American homes should be valuable in determining the extent to which America might borrow from the experience of the English in the construction of homes for average Americans.

Standards Differ.

"It is the difference between the viewpoints and standards of living of the two peoples," he said, "which is chiefly responsible for the dissimilarities between the American homes we are building and those we construct for our average home purchaser. The average American and the average Englishman both demand good construction. Other demands however, are so wide of each other that we have made no attempt to adapt our English ideas to our American operations. The type of American home which we are building is an attached six-room house of solid brick construction with central heating, hardwood floors, tiled bath, and all the other conveniences which the average American home purchaser demands. These homes are selling at $5,590.

"Our typical English offering is a semi-detached six-room house placed on a lot 22 feet wide and from 100 to 150 feet deep. Construction is of brick—we build no frame houses in England—with 11-inch-cavity walls; that is, double walls with air space for insulation. The roof is of concrete tile. The house has neither attic nor basement, and the footings go down only about 2 feet, since we have no frost-line worries. There is no central heating plant. The ground-floor living room measures 12 feet by 10 feet, with a dining room 10 feet by 10 feet and a kitchen 6 feet by 7 feet. The kitchen equipment includes a sink deep enough for some laundering—there are no laundry tubs—a water boiler, gas stove, and small cabinet. Refrigerators of any kind are seldom used. Upstairs there are two bedrooms, a nursery, and a small bath. The bath contains a tub and a water boiler and a linen cupboard. The flooring is of the same materials as flooring in the same rooms.

Completely Modern Kitchen

It may be hard to realize after more than 5 years of viewing streamlined kitchens but the room shown in the upper picture was once described as a "modern kitchen.' The room had plenty of light and ventilation, a modern four-burner gas range, generous-sized sink and a good cabinet. Of course it had not been planned to minimize the effort of preparing meals and washing dishes and there was no storage space to speak of but it was typical of the times. The lower picture shows the kitchen after a complete modernization. The equipment has been rearranged, mechanical refrigeration installed, sink with under cabinets and large work top substituted for the unhandy old one. Venetian blinds, new floor covering, and a large modern built-in cabinet has replaced the old one.

NEW INSULATING BOARDS COME IN PLEASING PASTEL COLORS

Time was when most building materials that had as a primary duty some structural chore had no concern with beauty. The modern trend is to incorporate beauty in everything if possible. So today lighting fixtures, bathroom equipment, and kitchens all are planned with an eye for appearance and effect as well as utility.

One of the most recent building products to make a bid for beauty is insulation. Formerly the boards were plain in color, or rather neutral, and usually had to be given an application of paint or paper when surfaces were exposed in the interior of rooms.

New finishes come in a wide variety of colors that can be made to blend with almost any scheme of decoration, while at the same time serving their original purpose of providing insulation. The following tints are standard and may be obtained at most material dealers: Ivory, sky blue, apricot, apple green, and shell pink.

Clay Brick Offer Home Building Range of Colors

Original brick used in building Colonial homes in Virginia and New England was first imported as ballast from England and then later made in the colonies from native clay. Existing houses of the pre-Revolutionary period show there was little color range. The prevailing tints being pinkish-red, deep red, and red with purplish tone.

Today when contemplating building a brick house the home owner can obtain almost any color or finish. A house can have an exterior of face brick, or glazed brick, or tile, all of which are clay products of the brick family. The type determined upon is a matter of selection, as all have approximately the same durability.

For restoration projects and reproduction hand-made brick is usually employed. This material usually costs slightly more than the machine-processed brick.

An existing house can be completely altered in appearance by venering with brick.

Roosevelt 'Blessing' Gets 1st Test in Oklahoma Today

NEW DEAL TO FIND OUT IF 'BOOSTS' HELP

550,000 Go to Polls Today to Decide Heated Race for Senate Nomination.

(By International News Service)

OKLAHOMA CITY—Providing the first major test for the New Deal since the campaigning President Roosevelt started his current transcontinental tour, voters marched to the polls in Oklahoma today in a bitter primary election that attracted nationwide interest.

A record turnout of more than 550,000 was expected. The weather was fair and warm.

Not only state but national interest centered in the three-cornered fight for the Democratic nomination for the U. S. senate. Seeking the nomination were Sen. Elmer Thomas, "old friend" of the president, Governor E. W. Marland, also a New Deal supporter, and Rep. Gomer Smith, a former vice president of the Townsend Old-Age pension plan.

President Roosevelt stopped in Oklahoma only last Saturday to boost hopes of "my very old friend," Sen. Thomas for renomination. The president said Thomas had been of enormous help to him in advising the administration of Oklahoma's needs at Washington. The president also had a few kind words for Gov. Marland but he did not mention Rep. Smith by name at all.

The primary climaxed one of the most bitter and colorful campaigns in the history of a state noted for its colorful politics.

Resumes Westward Junket.

EN ROUTE WEST WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT—(INS)—President Roosevelt came out of the Panhandle country of Texas today into Colorado, bound for the Pacific coast, still intent upon expounding the philosophy of the New Deal, and still intent upon taking part in this year's Democratic primaries.

He did dip into the Texas primary, which is to be decided on the 23rd, to the extent of endorsing nearly every member of congress for re-election, through whose district he passed.

Moreover, he announced, under dramatic circumstances, the appointment of Gov. James V. Allred, the young governor of the Lone Star state, as a federal judge for the southern district of Texas.

The Texas politicos also liked the rather humorous exchange of telegrams between Mr. Roosevelt and his second in command, Vice President John N. Garner, who decided to continue fishing in his favorite streams of southwest Texas, rather than to come to the Panhandle under blazing heat to welcome Mr. Roosevelt to a state where Democratic presidents seldom come.

Japs Launch Offensive to Capture Hankow

Up and Down THE STREET

Mansfield listeners to one of the radio shows originating in Hollywood the other night were surprised to hear the voice of a Richland county boy who "made good" in the film capital. He is Merrill Hanna, head electrician at one of the major studios there. Hanna, a former Shelby resident who has many friends here, explained the role the electrician plays in the making of a movie on the Hollywood Show Case program.

There was a "stray" bus among the city's fleet today, but officials of the Mansfield Rapid Transit, Inc., explained that it is only a visitor and may be here just for today. Built along modernistic lines and finished in tan and yellow paint, it has an exit at the right side near the back. En route from the southwest to Detroit, the bus is being tried out in Mansfield to show General Motors officials how it stands up under use on hills and at comparatively high speeds. It was used this morning on the Glessner avenue-Reformatory line.

Mrs. Stella Appleman, 779 Maple street, lays claim to being Mansfield's champion long-distance commuter. She is court stenographer of Huron county, Norwalk, and drives a distance of 74 miles a day to get to and from her work. Mrs. Appleman was court stenographer here for a number of years, and has served in that capacity at Norwalk for more than six years. In addition to being an expert court stenographer, Mrs. Appleman has developed into a more than ordinarily competent driver, for she has driven over roads that were sheets of ice, through mud, sleet and blinding snowstorms. In six years she has not missed a day at her Norwalk desk because of weather conditions.

A. L. (Reformatory Superintendent) Glattke was in a hurry last evening—in a hurry to get to Toledo where his old college friend, LeRoy (Bud) Parmelee, pitcher for the Minneapolis Millers of the American association, was the guest of honor at "Parmelee night" at the Toledo ball park. The event was staged by Monroe county, Mich., admirers of Big Bud, and was highlighted by the presentation to Parmelee of a revolver by the Monroe county sheriff (Parmelee is a deputy, though an honorary one). After the ceremonies, Bud pitched for the Millers and defeated Toledo, 10-5. Glattke and Parmelee played basketball together at Wittenberg "way back when."

RUSH WORK ON RELIEF SYSTEM

Auditor Acts to Place New Needy Aid Program Into Effect; Davey OK's It.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The state auditor's office moved swiftly today to put into effect a new poor relief program that became law with the signing by Gov. Martin L. Davey of measures passed by the recently-adjourned special session of the legislature.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, who with a yet-to-be-appointed director will compose a newly-created state relief administration, said that the machinery would be in full swing by the first of August.

"It will take but little time to get straightened up," he said. "Our first big job will be to investigate all relief cases and eliminate the ineligibles from the rolls."

Governor Davey has not yet indicated whom he will appoint to the $400-a-month post of director, but capital sources said that J. Freer Bittinger of Ashland and Roy L. Wildermuth of Columbus had been mentioned as possibilities. Wildermuth was chairman of the old relief commission that expired in April, 1937, and since has served as a deputy tax commissioner.

The governor approved the relief program, which provides $12,000,000 for the remainder of this year, late yesterday. Of the 10 bills he signed, eight applied to poor aid and public works and the other two set up a state institutional building authority, increased the salaries of state highway patrolmen $5 a month, and provided that highway department laborers be paid flat monthly salaries rather than by the hour.

WEIRTON HALTS BUSINESS TO PROTEST LABOR CASE RULING

(By Associated Press)

WEIRTON, W. Va.—Workers and business men of this steel town mobilized today for a "peaceful protest" march against the conduct of the 11-month-old Weirton Steel company case by Labor Board Examiner Edward Grandison Smith.

The residents of Weirton and of adjoining Hollidays Cove adopted without protest last night a resolution calling for the closing of every place of business in the two towns to protest the barring from the hearing of Clyde A. Armstrong, chief company counsel for the subsidiary of E. T. Weir's National Steel corporation.

The ruling by Smith was the climax of frequent and bitter clashes between counsel and the examiner during the long National Labor Relations board case. Weirton Steel—one of those "little steel" firms that has steadfastly refused to bargain with the CIO-affiliated Steel Workers' Organizing committee — is charged with unfair labor practices, including the domination of its employes, in violation of the Wagner act.

As the hearing progressed, it became more tense; once Smith broke his gavel and shattered the glass top of his desk while pounding for order. Last Thursday Armstrong started making an objection to certain testimony. Smith ordered him to "sit down" and Armstrong refused.

Smith, in barring the attorney yesterday, said his behavior was "defiant, contemptuous and contumacious" and that he had failed to show "remorse or repentence."

The workers and business men adopted their resolution at an overflow meeting at Colonial hall, which accommodates 2,000, and decided to march tomorrow to Steubenville, O., across the Ohio river. They agreed to appear at the federal building there, where the hearing is being held, to demand Armstrong's reinstatement.

U. S. CITIZENS REFUSE TO QUIT BESIEGED CITY

10 Americans Remain While Nippon Troops Open Fire on Kuikiang Front.

(By United Press)

SHANGHAI—Japanese advance forces attacked Chinese defenses within a few miles of Kiukiang today to start a battle which military experts believed would seal the fate of Hankow, the provisional capital.

About 10 Americans were in the city, an important Yantgse river port 135 miles below Hankow. They made no attempt to seek refuge aboard the United States gunboat Monocacy which, with the British gunboat Cockhafer, had docked about three miles below the city.

The Chinese government had ordered the Monocacy upriver, but the American officers aboard refused to obey.

Sink Pontoons.

Chinese authorities at Kiukiang ordered the Standard Oil company to sink three of their pontoons on the Yangtse in an effort to prevent Japanese troop landings. Socony employes sank one and later Chinese troops shelled and sank the others.

The United States consulate general will protest the incident and the Standard Oil company will demand indemnity.

Japanese guns on warships between Kiukiang and Hukow, 20 miles down river, were pouring shells into the defenses on the city's outskirts. Chinese reports admitted that the Japanese were within 10 miles of Kiukiang.

Both Chinese and Japanese reports indicated that a spectacular battle was in progress on Poyang lake, southeast of Kiukiang. Japanese airplanes were bombing Chinese gunboats attacking small Japanese boats attempting to land troops on the west shore.

The Japanese boats were endangered because the lake, formerly the Chinese navy's base for mine-laying maneuvers, was filled with mines.

FUNDS ARRIVE

The funds will be allocated by county commissioners to Mansfield, Shelby and the townships with the heaviest relief burden. The bulk of the funds will go to Mansfield and Madison township which have most of the relief cases in the county.

GEN. JOHNSON:

'Sooners' May Not Agree With President But They Understand His Meaning

—By HUGH S. JOHNSON

BETHANY BEACH, Del.—The president did a masterly professional job in Oklahoma. My state likes her politics raw and blistering. With his genius for tuning to popular temper, Mr. Roosevelt served it exactly so. Disagreeing, but being an Oklahoman, the radio thrilled me with a masterpiece of politics, showmanship, and enough stuff on the ball to satisfy the toughest Sooner from the short-grass country and still not demean the official dignity of the speaker.

As Oklahoma colored folks say, he had his fighting "habits" on, and that is when I like him best. But so skillfully was this super-punching done that the press accounts said that he was gentle with senatorial candidate Gomer Smith, didn't take a crack at gubernatorial candidate Alfalfa Bill Murray, and only mildly endorsed the senatorial incumbent — Yes-man Thomas.

No old-time Oklahoman would agree. The president demonstrated that he knows his native Sooner product better. His only burst of true and tumultuous cow-camp applause was when he interpolated extemporaneously that one of the candidates for the Democratic state ticket was nationally known as a Republican. My 83-year-old mother, who pioneered that state since long before its beginning, and knows as much about its politics as anybody, rocked with laughter as this came over the radio and chuckled: "That pinked Bill."

It referred to the fact that Alfalfa Murray, as governor before, in his 1936 bitterness, made the deadly mistake of introducing Alf Landon, who was political poison in Oklahoma.

Old Bill, with my own father, helped organize the Democratic party in Oklahoma. He was responsible as any for the break that nominated Woodrow Wilson. Calling him a Republican is like calling Hamilton Fish a Communist or, for that matter, calling Mr. Roosevelt a Democrat.

But that isn't the point. The point is the amazing dexterity in side-swiping the Democratic candidate for governor in favor of the WPA candidate—Keys—by a deft and deadly punch to the most vulnerable spot in Alfalfa's whole anatomy. The cleverness of that was what brought the old "ki-yi-yip" out of my state-mates, whether they agreed with it or not—and most of them don't.

Another solar-plexis punch was aimed at Gomer Smith—in addition to attributing the Red river dam to Senator Elmer Thomas, when everybody in Oklahoma knows it was Congressman Disney's baby.

In the last senatorial primary, Gomer was a Doc Townsend advocate in a contest of impossible promises with John Lee, who promised "a farm for every farmer and a house for every worker"—the "every man a king" theme of Huey Long. Josh Lee outpromised him, but now Gomer is fighting the president's "old friend," Elmer Thomas. And did Mr. Roosevelt by another anonymous adroitness bat Gomer's ears down? He talked about "people with panaceas" who would "reform the world overnight." That spotted Gomer in the mind of every real Oklahoman. Then Mr. Roosevelt sent over his sizzler. Such people, if not exactly in Theodore Roosevelt's "lunatic fringe," are so close that a slight shock would send them to the nut-house.

Gomer, on this policy, is precisely in the president's beloved Senator Pepper's record and position. He is crazy like a fox. He also is of the red clay of the Sooner state while Elmer is a transplanted and highly perfumed posy which, I think, the old timers are about to pluck.

If memory serves, Teddy's "lunatic fringe" were, in part, people who would cure all ills by printing unlimited worthless money to pay for unlimited governmental spending. That is precisely Elmer's lunatic panacea. If there is a lunatic fringe of panacea-mongers, both Oklahoma senators are far deeper in it than Gomer Smith.

But this isn't a piece in praise of political sanity or honesty—only on political adroitness.

Hollywood Speaks---

By ROBBIN COONS

Robbin Coons, our Hollywood columnist, is in New York to see what movie activities are like in the east.

NEW YORK—The search for a lady who might be called the toast of New York leads to the Ritz Towered retreat of Vera Zorina, sometime and again-to-be of Hollywood.

Miss Zorina (courtesy Sam Goldwyn, as the program note informs) is the classic-featured Norwegian whose performance and dancing grace are such potent attractions in the S. R. O. musical of Rodgers and Hart, "I Married An Angel." In Hollywood she has been seen thus far only in the "Goldwyn Follies," in a role scarcely suggestive of the furore she could create as a romantic comedienne.

Mr. Goldwyn's courtesy recently was extended to permit Zorina's remaining for the run of the play. It was rather a strain on the Goldwyn courtesy to permit her to do the play at all, but Zorina had promised Producer Dwight Wiman long ago when she was in the London cast of "On Your Toes," and to Mr. Goldwyn a promise is a promise—especially when a show looks like a hit. After Sam first pronounced the famous two words ("im-possible") Zorina hopped into a plane, caught Sam in New York, and convinced him it was possible. Sam thought a girl in pictures ought to stay in pictures. If she wanted the stage, she ought to forget pictures.

"But I could not do that," Zorina says. "I want pictures, but I want the stage and dancing too. I could never give up any of them. I want to go on—there is so much I must learn. I must learn to sing. I must develop as an actress. Some day I must play a serious dramatic role. I must keep on with the ballet. I must—"

But right here I must point out a couple of things myself. The first is that Zorina, wearing a slim-waisted blue peasantish frock, her every gesture a poem in grace, is the kind of interview subject who needn't say a thing. You can just sit and look and study—and you get what I mean. The second is that Zorina, at 21, has attained stardom on stage, screen, ballet.

And not by accident. She was dancing when she was three. She was always dancing, always wanted to dance. Little Brigita Hartwig of Kristiansund, Norway, grew up in Berlin, studying dancing and the arts. She became Vera Zorina when she joined the Ballet Russe, wherein a Russion name is always demanded. (But Rodgers and Hart borrowed Brigita for her character name in their musical.)

As if a nightly show and the usual matinees and a morning devoted to ballet study were not enough, Zorina has serious plans for painting and sculpture.

But as a "toast of New York" she is almost naively delighted.

"I have two nice letters from people who want to organize Zorina fan clubs. Isn't that sweet—but what must I do, how should I answer them? I try so hard to answer all who write—I write and write so much that I have no time to write my own family. I am so flattered when my autograph is asked, but I cannot understand this craze for autographs. From the president, and from famous statesmen and writers and musicians, yes—but we who dance and act, we come and go so quickly what will our names be worth a few years from now?"

I couldn't answer that one. But if I collected stage and movie autographs, I'd want Zorina's on past performance and future promise.

WHITEHILL FACES SENATORS TODAY

Indians Play 12 Games Against Nats, Yankees, Red Sox and A's on Current Trip.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Again facing the challenge to prove they can win on the road the Cleveland Indians came here today to open a crucial tour of the east.

Earl Whitehill, veteran southpaw, was slated to work for the Indians, with Rookie Kendall Chase opposing him.

With a two-game lead in the tight American league pennant chase, Cleveland is scheduled for three games here and then will play a like number at Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

On their last swing of the east the Indians made impressive showings here and at Philadelphia, but collapsed when pitted against the Yanks and the Red Sox.

Upon arrival here Manager Oscar Vitt said he would be satisfied if the Tribe could play .500 ball on this swing. However, Vitt admitted such a performance might not be good enough to keep the club on top since both the Yanks and the Red Sox are "hot."

The success of the Cleveland invasion may rest upon Bob Feller, the youthful speedball ace. Handicapped by a blistered finger on his pitching hand, the Iowa farmboy has been wild and ineffective in recent starts. If the Indians are to stay in the race it is essential that Feller recover his early season form.

Double Threat Confronts Giants.

THOSE countless fans throughout the country who are shouting for somebody to beat out the two New York clubs in the pennant races had plenty of reason today to stand up and bellow.

While the Cleveland Indians temporarily had the "Yankee menace" under control in the American league, a double threat appeared to oust the Giants from their National league lead. On the eve of the Giants' departure for their most critical road trip of the year, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati gained additional ground on New York.

Mean Business.

It was only half a game each, but the way the Pirates and Reds won was highly significant. They won like they meant business. The Pirates twice came from behind to down the Chicago Cubs, 5-3, and reduced the Giants' lead to a game and a half. It was the Pirates' twelfth straight triumph, longest winning streak of the major league season.

Cincinnati lashed out with an eight-run rally in the first inning to conquer the St. Louis Cardinals, 9-5 for their fourth straight victory.

Pittsburgh's startling spurt is one of the greatest drives ever made by the Pirates in mid-season.

In yesterday's game the Pirates went into the ninth trailing 3-2 and staged a three-run rally off Hard Luck Larry French. With the bases loaded Relief Pitcher Jim Tobin singled to drive in two runs after the Pirates had tied the score. Then Mace Brown stopped the Cubs in the ninth, causing Pinch-Hitter Tony Lazzeri to hit into a double play to end the game.

Eight In First.

The Reds batted around in the first inning as they scored eight runs off Henshaw and Harrell. Billy Myers and Lonnie Frey hit homers during the big rally.

No other games were played.

Don't count the Yuncker Sports out of The News-Journal Class A golf league race at this early date.

The Sports have wallowed around in the second division since the season got under way, but today they are only three points out of second place and five out of first.

The Yuncker club pounced on the Matthes Clothiers at Possum Run yesterday to register a 4 to 1 victory to climb within striking distance of the leaders.

Carl Kushin accounted for the lone Matthes' point with a brilliant 36 to edge his brother, Al, who carded a 38. Kleshinski, Leuthner and Knoll added the match points for the Sports.

The DeLuxe Cabs retained first place despite a 3 to 2 setback administered by the Goldsmith Clothiers. Deley drove out a 36 and Malaska built up a 37 to give the Cabs enough points to remain on top by a two-point margin over the Richland Printers.

Vild and Zeides rolled out 38's for the Clothiers and Pilot smashed out a victory with a 39.

The Big Three Beers moved into a tie for fifth place with the Matthes team by edging the Printers, 2 to 1, with two points in doubt because of a postponement.

Pete Linster annexed medal honors with a 35 to tally the only point for the Printers, while Frome and Loykovich gave the Beers the edge with respective counts of 38 and 39.

Starts Wyatt Against Tribe

Shotton Picks New Dodger for All-Star Game.

INDIANAPOLIS — (AP) — Burt Shotton, manager of the American association all-stars, announced today that Whitlow Wyatt, ace of the Milwaukee Brewers hurling staff, would be on the mound for the stars at the start of their game against Indianapolis' league leading Indians in the annual game here Thursday night.

Wyatt, who has pitched six shutouts this season, was sold only yesterday to Brooklyn, for delivery at the close of the association season. He will work three innings.

A complete sellout of the 10,000 seats for the game appeared almost certain.

Based on past performances the Indians should be favorites to win the game. Only once in four previous contests have the stars come out ahead. They ticked the Milwaukee Brewers in 1936.

Fullager Hurls Johnnies to 9-1 Win Over Sportsmen; Prospect Defeats Liberty Park, 9-6.

JIMMY FULLAGER hurled Johns Park to the first half championship of the City Class A softball league yesterday.

Performing in great style on the hill at North park, Fullager yielded only five hits as he hurled the Johnnies to a 9 to 1 victory over the Richland county fish and game representatives of North park.

North Park finished the first half in second place, two games behind Manager John Flockenizer's team.

Ross Leads Attack.

Harry Ross led the 11-hit attack for the Johnnies with three safeties. Included in his hit turnout was a triple, which, undoubtedly, would have been a home run had the ball not struck a tree in left field.

Bob Bride enabled the Johns park club to add to its run total with a home run in the seventh with one aboard.

The victory qualifies the Johnnies for the play-off to determine the league championship. Of course, if the Johnnies also win the second half opening next Monday, a series will not be necessary.

Fullager hurled seven scoreless innings before the Sportsmen put their lone run across the plate. He struck out five and did not issue a walk.

North park's lone run came in the eighth when it coupled a pair of errors with an infield out.

Gettles and Bauer did the hurling for the Sportsmen, the former issuing six walks during his tenure on the mound.

Johns park tallied its first run in the opening inning on a walk and successive singles by Harry Ross and Bride. The Johnnies did not score again until the fifth when they tallied five times.

Score Five Times.

Two bases on balls, singles by Kenny and Harry Ross and Bride's long Ruthian clout provided the five runs. The final runs manufactured by the new champions were registered in the seventh on singles by Lewis and Kenny Ross, Harry Ross' lengthy triple and Bride's fly to center.

A feature of the game was the fielding of Ed Henrich of North park around second base. He robbed the winners of numerous hits by his flashy ground covering.

an advantage that was not seriously threatened.

Prospect made good use of the 10 hits it collected off the combined delivery of Bush and Wentz.

Nick Weber obtained two hits for Prospect and Frisbee contributed a home run with two on the sacks to stake his team to the lead it never lost in the first inning. Forman, Schaeffer, Gimzer, Vogel and Kuelling each got two bingles for the Liberties.

Longshore walked and Nick Weber singled before Frisbee clouted out his circuit drive in the first.

Falk's single, Valentine's walk, Judy's triple and Longshore's triple enabled Prospect to tally three more in the second. Prospect added another run in the sixth and completed its scoring with a pair in the eighth.

Nick Weber doubled to open the eighth for Prospect. Stickler singled and Beal tripled, the latter scoring on Forman's error.

Tally In First.

Schaeffer's single, following walks issued to Hummel and Forman, gave Liberty its first run in the opening inning. The hosts tallied another run in the sixth and two in the seventh on Bush's double and singles by Vogel and Musille.

The other Liberty markers were registered in the eighth and ninth innings, the final run coming after Vogel doubled. He raced to third on an infield out and scored on Frisbee's error.

Judy's play in left field featured the Prospect team's defensive play.

Prospect Park Snaps Out of Slump.

PROSPECT park won its second straight game yesterday to finish in a tie with Liberty park for third place in the City Class A softball league.

The Prospectors, who lost their first four games, defeated Liberty park, 9 to 6, at Liberty park yesterday in the final game of the first round.

Frisbee on Mound.

Ted Frisbee was on the mound for Manager John Valentine's club, and although yielding 12 hits, he turned in a fine performance to limit the Liberties to one run in the first five innings.

He weakened in the latter frames, but not enough to permit the Liberty team to overcome the lead obtained by his teammates. Prospect scored three runs in each of the first two innings to secure

'Battle of Blonds' Looms In Ohio Tournament

By FRITZ HOWELL.

AKRON—(AP)—Eight matches were on tap at the Portage club today in the quest for the 19th annual Ohio Women's Golf championship, but the gallery was looking forward to the possibility of another "battle of the blonds" between 19-year-old Janet Shock of Dayton and 20-year-old Eva Shorb of Massillon.

Miss Shock had Isabel Oglivie of Cleveland, 1937 finalist, to dispose of today, while Miss Shorb had to push aside Mrs. John Pennington of Cleveland to make the "natural" possible.

The blond co-eds, Miss Shock of Denison university and Miss Shorb of Wooster college, have met twice in fairway fights with the Dayton miss, only girl in history to win a place on an Ohio varsity golf team, victorious each time.

Miss Shorb is Akron district champion however and the betting around the rubber city is that "Janet can't do it again."

Miss Shock won the medalist honors in yesterday's qualifying round with a 79, three over par and then added the driving contest laurels to her list with a three-ball average of 202 yards. Her drive of 219 yards was the best of the day.

Here's how they teed off today in the opening round of match play, the figures in parenthesis being the qualifying scores:

Miss Janet Shock, Dayton, (79) vs. Miss Isabel Oglivie, Cleveland (87).

Miss Eva Shorb, Massillon, (83) vs. Mrs. John Pennington, Cleveland (88).

Mrs. Linton Fallis, Toledo, (81) vs. Mrs. E. F. Beeler, Akron, (88).

Mrs. Charles Harbaugh, Cleveland (84) vs. Mrs. H. P. Welsh, Ashland, (89).

Mrs. Burt Weil, Cincinnati (80), vs. Mrs. Warren Billings, Akron, (88).

Miss Dorothy Gardner, Steubenville (84) vs. Miss Sally Elson, Columbus, (88).

Mary K. Browne, Cleveland, (82) vs. Miss Dorothy Schildmiller, Cincinnati, (88).

Miss Naoma Cope, Toledo, (84) vs. Mrs. Curtis Sohl, Columbus, (89).

The survivors meet in single 18-hole matches through Thursday, with the 36-hole finals coming up Friday.

Fail to Qualify For Title Flight

Mansfield representatives in the Ohio Women's golf tournament failed to qualify for the championship flight in the trials held at Akron Portage yesterday.

Mrs. Allen Tappan and Mrs. E. R. Hartman led the Mansfield qualifiers with 107's. Mrs. A. J. Reynolds qualified with 114 and Mrs. A. E. Allen shot 116 in the trials. All are representatives of Westbrook Country club.

Today Mrs. Tappan met Mrs. Don Kepple of Akron, Mrs. Hartman faced Mrs. Alice Wilcox of Toledo, Mrs. Reynolds was paired with Mrs. H. A. Hall of Akron and Mrs. Allen opposed Mrs. C. A. Covert of Akron.

Lesser Lights In Spotlight on P. G. A. Front

By BILL BONI

SHAWNEE - ON - DELAWARE, Pa.—(AP)—As match play began today in the National P. G. A. championship over the table-top fairways of the Shawnee Country club, Defending Champion Denny Shute topped the first quarter of the draw, with three lesser-known campaigners holding the other honor spots.

One of them, probably, never will do much better than the 138 he posted to tie for second place in the two-day, 36-hole qualifying round. He is blond Harry Nettelbladt of Framingham, Mass. Harry has qualified for match play twice before and has been bounced out each time in the first round. Even if he should get by his opening test against Johnny Kinder of Plainfield, N. J., he probably would run up against three-time winner Gene Sarazen this afternoon.

The other two, Frank Moore of Mamaroneck, N. Y., the medalist with an eight-under-par 136, and Marvin Stahl, the youngster from Lansing, Mich., who equalled Nettelbladt's 138, are in their competitive prime, and both seem ready to step out in earnest.

Neither is a youngster in golf. Moore, now 29, has had to travel in the shadow of his baseball-playing brother, Terry, until now. He began the game as a kid caddie in Memphis, Tenn.; spent five years as an electrical engineer in St. Louis, then came back to golf when engineering went sour in 1930. Stahl, 28, began caddying at 11, was teaching as an assistant at 16, and for the last six years has been a full-fledged pro with his own club.

Moore is casual about everything. He decided that his medal-winning would satisfy him even if Virginia's Ernie Ball knocks him out in the first round.

Shute, given No. 1 spot in the numerical (no seeded players) draw as title defender, was to meet Clyde Usina, jr., and Stahl with Clarence Clark, big Bloomfield, N. J., blond.

Feature first-round matches: Ed Dudley vs. Johnny Farrell; Harry Cooper vs. Felix Serafin, stout Pennsylvania veteran; Sam Parks vs. Jug McSpaden, 1937 runner-up; Sarazen vs. Leo Walper; Johnny Revolta vs. Wiffy Cox, and Ralph Guldahl vs. John Malutic. If Guldahl wins as expected, he probably will meet Dick Metz, runner-up to him at Denver, this afternoon.

ROBERT ABRAMS FINISHES AMONG LEADERS IN GOLF

Robert Abrams, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Abrams, 72 Glenwood boulevard, finished among the leaders in the golf tournament held at Camp Roosevelt, Perry, O., where the Mansfield boy is spending the summer. He is also a member of the camp baseball team which plays a regular schedule of games.

Dizzy Dean Ready To Climb Mound

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Dizzy Dean, who has been idle two months with a mysterious "kink" in his right arm, may start pitching again for the skidding Chicago Cubs in a week of 10 days, Manager Charley Grimm indicated today.

Diz started toughening up his $250,000 arm immediately after Owner Phil K. Wrigley and Grimm learned from a physician that pitching will make Dean's arm no sorer and will do no further damage.

JOE LOUIS ENTERS RING, BUT AS A REFEREE

CHICAGO — (INS) — Joe Louis, heavyweight champ, will enter the ring here tomorrow night—as a referee. He will act as third man in one bout as the Catholic Youth Organization's boxing team meets the best amateur boxers from Ireland. Gene Tunney also will be a guest official in one of the 10 bouts.

Kingfish's Dream Turns Out to Be Nightmare.

DES MOINES, Ia. — (INS) — Kingfish Levinsky's dream of a comeback turned out to be a nightmare today. The Chicago ex-fish peddler lost the first fight of his announced comeback last night when his seconds threw in the towel after two knockdowns in the third round of his bout with Johnny Pachek, Des Moines heavyweight. Levinsky was fat and obviously out of condition.

MOTORS, STEELS FIRM IN QUIET STOCK SESSION

Utilities, Coppers and Oils Fall to Lower Levels; Sugar Issues Up.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Markets shook off their lethargy today and resumed their advance over a broad front. Stocks more than made up losses of the previous session. Sugars and aviations started the rise.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—The stock market turned extremely quiet today, as leadesr backed and filled in a narrow and irregular trading range. Easier tendencies ruled at the opening in a continuation of yesterday's reaction, but the list steadied almost immediately.

Sustaining factor in the market was the firm tone in motors and steels. Sugar, chemical and aviation shares also ruled generally higher, although a few issues in these groups were backward. Rails utilities, coppers and oils were inclined to somewhat lower levels.

Widest price movements were shown by sugars, chemicals and a few blue-chips. South Porto Rico and American Sugar Refining each were up more than a point, while Fajardo spurted better than 2. Union Carbide gained a point, in the chemicals.

"If business improves as a result of this effort, we can reasonably expect another order or two of equal size," Allen added.

CUT-OFF PAVING FACES DELAY

Property Owner's Suit Over Easement Again Threatens Project at Windsor.

The possibility of a further delay in starting work on the Windsor cut-off on route 42 was seen today when a property owner along the proposed route filed an action in common pleas court asking the court to determine the amount of compensation due him for a highway easement on his land.

The action was filed by Anton Reiser, jr., who refused to accept $61 offered by the state highway department several days ago for the easement.

Wrangles over easements for the highway right-of-way and the failure to obtain necessary federal funds for the project have repeatedly delayed work on the cut-off which was started four years ago.

Recently, however, obstacles apparently were removed and the highway department accepted bids for construction of the 3.59 miles of road.

Appeal bond for Reiser was set at $100. He is represented in his suit by Atty. Joseph A. Bayer.

BUCYRUS MAN NAMED

LIMA—(U.P.)—Charles E. Davis 37, of Bucyrus, today was named principal of South high here, effective Sept. 1. He will succeed Joseph H. Davison who resigned to become superintendentt of schools at Ashland, Pa.

BEWARE OF "GYP" DRY CLEANERS

Investigate Before You Invest

Out of town, fly-by-night Dry Cleaners claiming to operate branches here are attempting to interest you in their services.

Many reports come to this office every day, indicating that both the solicitors and their companies, are not reliable.

Do not be misled by a plea of economy and low cost. Ultimately, you will pay more in disappointment, ruined garments, poor service and inferior workmanship.

Mansfield dry cleaning establishments are local institutions, employing hundreds of Mansfield people—they are a part of this community—they carry insurance to safeguard themselves and you against loss: they are conducted by reputable men who value your patronage. They are permanent institutions. Patronize them.

STERN KNIGHT FROM THE NORTH CHANGES COURSE OF BABS' LIFE

This is the fifth of six articles on the life of Countess Barbara Hutton von Haugwitz-Reventlow by Helen Welshimer, well-known writer.

By HELEN WELSHIMER

NEW YORK CITY—One day after Barbara Hutton Mdivani received her divorce decree from Prince Alexis in Reno, Nev., she married again.

This time instead of a sports-loving prince from the East, she united her life with that of a sober Dane. But again it was nobility. The dreams of her childhood could not be denied.

This well-behaved man did not go in for fast horses and fast motor cars. He had a scholarly disposition. He was 17 years older than Barbara, sedate, home-loving, but possessed of the charm which she always had sought.

An Anchor.

He desired to establish a home and lineage. He did not belong to the fast-living international social crowd that swarms to St. Moritz and the Lido. He seemed to be the anchor Princess Babbs needed after the storms of her early twenties.

Barbara, it must be said, never went in for title-bearing tramps Mdivani's family line was not questioned. He had reasonable wealth in his own right and he did not need to play the market for an American heiress.

Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow persuaded Barbara to settle down in an establishment in London.

But during her honeymoon she once against was snatched back to brutal reality. Mdivani was killed—killed at 80 miles an hour in one of his custom-made cars as he drove a guest of his sister's to a train in France.

In Seclusion for Weeks.

When his will was read, Barbara found herself heir to one-third of his estate. She went into seclusion for weeks in the midst of her honeymoon. Her first knight was dead.

After meeting the international crowd, Barbara had started to trim down the buxom lines of a well-fed American heiress. In two years she lost 42 pounds.

Then she was confined. That was two years ago. She was to give birth to a son with a noble title. Dreams coming true, we might say. But she nearly paid for it with her life. She dipped into violent reality again. For days she lay between life and death.

Her ever-loyal father hastened to her side. The great doctors of England, the most successful obstetricians, were called into consultation. They knew she could not give birth normally. A Caesarean delivery was decided upon.

Lance Is Born.

So Barbara had the son of the count. They called him Lance. Even this name is suggestive of something in an early romance that his mother may have read in those little-girl years.

Lance, too, came into a world of wealth that waited for him. He had his own flat in the London mansion. There were three living rooms, and two bathrooms with heated towel rails.

Now the noble strain was established. Frank Woolworth's throne-like office had passed from Gothic embellishments and gilded plaster into flesh and blood.

ELECTRICIAN FACES ARREST IN BOMB CASE

Warrant Issued at Ashland Charges Nova Suspect With Possession of Explosives.

(By Staff Correspondent)

ASHLAND—A warrant for the arrest of Roman Trocki, a Nova electrician, was sworn out today by Deputy Sheriff Dale Hammond, who has been investigating the attempted bombing of the Topping warehouse here on June 14.

The warrant charges Trocki with illegal possession of explosives. Sheriff Wallett said the charges were drawn against the Nova man after nearly a month of secret investigation by the sheriff's office and A. Ross Siverling, Ashland county prosecutor.

While he declined to reveal how the suspect had been tracked down, Wallett said he was certain that the man had had the explosives in his possession. He said it had not yet been established where the purchase was made.

The sheriff added that his investigation disclosed that Trocki was missing from his home on the same day the bomb made from six quarts of nitro-glycerine and 12 sticks of dynamite was found planted beside the Topping warehouse in downtown Ashland.

It also has been definitely established, Wallett said, that Trocki went to Michigan on the same day. He said Mrs. Trocki could not be located although she had not left her home with her husband.

He said that Trocki who is of foreign extraction, operated a shop near Nova for the past several years. He is not a naturalized citizen although he has filed papers declaring his intentions of becoming a citizen.

The bomb, with a 30-foot partially burned fuse, was found beside the warehouse used to store foodstuffs sent by plane last summer to Republic Steel plants during the little steel strike in the Mahoning valley.

First investigation was made by Ashland police and later agents of the F. B. I. in Cleveland were called. Authorities at the time said the powerful charge was enough to have blown up the entire downtown section.

FATHER OF FIVE ENDS OWN LIFE

Anton Stirtzinger Found in Basement; Had Hanged Self From Pipe.

Apparently despondent, a 65-year-old father of five children yesterday ended his life in the basement of his home by hanging himself from a gas pipe with a bed sheet.

The body of Anton Stirtzinger, 375 Third avenue, was found suspended from the pipe by a son about a half hour after his father had gone to the basement.

County Coroner Hugh C. Winbigler gave a verdict of suicide, and gave despondency as the reason for the act.

Police said that Mr. Stirtzinger had been to Cleveland with a son and another friend yesterday and had seemed in normal spirits. The party arrived in Mansfield shortly after 8 p. m. Mr. Stirtzinger went to the basement while the son visited neighbors. A search later revealed his body hanging from the pipe.

Born in Austria-Hungary, Dec. 11, 1872, Mr. Stirtzinger came to Mansfield in 1905. He was employed at the Ohio Brass company for 19 years.

Mr. Stirtzinger was widely known in music circles and was a member of various Mansfield musical organizations.

He was a member of the St. John Evangelical Lutheran church brotherhood, German Benevolent union, Woodmen of America and German Sick Benefit association.

Surviving are his wife, Katherine; three sons, John, Philip and Steve; two daughters, Mrs. Paul Jerger and Mrs. Joseph Hetler, all of Mansfield, a brother, John of Detroit, and 12 grandchildren.

The body was removed to the Geiger funeral home. Arrangements are not complete.

Statler Millionaire or Pauper?

When this photo was taken of Ellsworth M. Statler, heir to the hotel fortune, and his bride, Barbara, former $85-a-month dentist's assistant in Hollywood, love ran smoothly, but their relations are not so amicable now. His estranged wife is asking Statler for a separate maintenance of $1,500 a month, a sum which he said in court he was unable to pay. His attitude implied that he was very hazy about the exact state of his finances and his most definite statement was to the effect that he had $9.08 in the bank on deposit. He denied he had annual income of $100,000 as contended by his wife.

OCEAN-FLYING PIONEER HERE

Chamberlin Cruises Over City as Hughes Dashes for Moscow.

a 200-horsepower engine with a maximum speed of 125 miles an hour. Hughes' two super-charged motors develop 2,200 horsepower and he's flying at more than 200 miles an hour. He has equipment that keeps him in constant touch with land and with ships at sea. There was no means of communication on my plane; when we cut loose out over the Atlantic, we were entirely cut off from the rest of the world.

"And I had to stick as close to the wheel as a motorist," he continued. "What I mean, I had to pilot every minute of the trip. The Hughes plane is equipped with an automatic pilot. He could set his plane for Paris as he left New York and he could almost land there without changing his steering equipment. He is equipped with a radio compass which permits him to tune in on any broadcasting station in the world simply by turning a dial. The refinements in radio in the last few years have advanced aviation immeasurably. Flying equipment now is down to near perfection."

"Then why," he was asked, "do the best pilots still crack-up? Why do we still have air tragedies?

"The one thing we can't improve," he answered, "is the weather. I'd say at least 95 per cent of all plane accidents are due to weather conditions. That's I believe the future of aviation lies in stratosphere flying. Flying at an altitude of 35,000 feet, in a sealed cabin and with super-charged motors, the pilot has neither storm, wind, clouds nor mountain peaks to fear. I'm working on an engine now designed for flying at an altitude of approximately 40,000 feet I believe stratosphere flying will remove all danger from weather conditions, and even now mechanical trouble on the plane has been reduced to where it causes only a small per cent of accidents so that stratosphere flying should make flying 95 per cent safer than it is now."

Chamberlin commented on Mansfield's need of an airport with hard runways, in view of the new mail lines which the government plans.

"You need some person interested in aviation as a director of your airport, and a little money each year for maintenance," he said. You could probably get most of the money from the federal government for improving it."

The pioneer of the airways is visiting relatives while in the vicinity. He is a nephew of Fred I. Chamberlin of Lucas and a cousin of Ralph Chamberlin News-Journal employe. The noted flyer came to Mansfield in 1928 when funds were raised to purchase the land for the airport.

Elks Club Burglary Suspect Arraigned in Court.

Pleading innocent when arraigned before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch in municipal court today on a charge of breaking and entering Thomas Cantrell, 26, colored, of 263 North Adams street, waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bond.

Cantrell was arrested by detectives yesterday and charged with burglarizing the Elks club Saturday night. Brought to the station the man denied any knowledge of the crime.

However, after Dr. Paul Baird, assistant city-county health commissioner fitted a piece of flesh, which had been found on a window sill at the club, on Cantrell's injured finger and announced "it is a perfect fit," he admitted he had entered the club through a rear window shortly after it had closed at 11 p m. Saturday, police said.

E. C. Fuller, identification expert, who found the bit of flesh during his investigation at the club said nothing had been taken although an attempt had been made to break open a vending machine.

HUGHES ROARING OVER SIBERIA

Speed Fliers Reach Moscow From Paris in 7 Hours, Rush on to Omsk.

port officials, waving aside all offers of food and drink as his companions ate a lunch of fried eggs, cold ham and salami served with beer and ice water in the airport dining room.

Reports of good weather were received from points along the Siberian route as far as the Bering Straits, separating Russian territory from Alaska.

Hughes planned to make his only other Siberian landing, besides Omsk, at Yakutsk, 2,100 miles to the east. However, Soviet authorities provided him with maps showing seven other airdomes and emergency landing places

Return to Port.

Hughes and his comrades got off from Moscow only after one unsuccessful attempt, which was defeated by a change in direction of the wind But they finally cleared the field with a heavy fuel load.

Their flying time for the 1,541 miles from Paris was 7 hours and 49 minutes, and they refueled at once for the next hop of 1,624 miles to Omsk, in their effort to beat the world record of 7 days, 18 hours and 49 minutes set by Wiley Post in 1933. Weather indications were adverse winds the first 1,000 miles with a favorable breeze after that.

Representatives of the American embassy and Alexander Troyanovsky, the Soviet ambassador to Washington who is home on leave, were in the crowd that watched the silver ship glide to a perfect landing out of the cloudless, summer sky.

Hughes said the flight from Paris was smooth but at high altitude. Radio Engineer Richard N. Stoddard explained they encountered icing conditions over France, compelling them to climb to 15,000 feet. "We were using oxygen tanks part of the time," he said.

The airport was all ready for the airmen. Two rooms were set aside for them, one for rest and another for eating. A meal had been ready for hours and the Russians' earnest effort to supply ice-water, without which Americans say they cannot live here, kept waiters busy.

Ice cubes in water glasses on the luncheon table had been renewed no less than six times while the welcomers awaited their guests.

A crowd of spectators jammed the dining room and watched while the fliers tried to snatch a quick lunch.

Georgi Baidukoff, one of the Russian polar fliers, greeted Hughes with the remark "I'll see you in America," leading to speculation whether he was contemplating another flight soon.

Mikhail Gromoff and Andrei Yumosheff, others of the polar crew, also were in the crowd.

Post's flight to Moscow in 1933, via Berlin rather than Paris, required an elapsed time of 50 hours and 10 minutes from New York. He was in the air 35½ hours, and his distance at the Moscow point was 4,933 miles.

Hughes at Moscow was 32 hours and 53 minutes out of New York, having flown 5,151 miles with a total time in the air of 24 hours and 24 minutes.

Post broke his Berlin-Moscow hop with a stop at Koenigsberg, 340 miles from Berlin and 651 from Moscow. He flew the 991 miles in two hops in 9 hours and 45 minutes.

A 2,500 gallon tank car of gasoline had been rolled on to the airport early this morning, and a special ground crew was ready to start refueling at once.

Americans Welcome Fliers.

Members of the American colony shared their automobiles for the trip to the airport to welcome the fliers. The crowd which gathered at the field Monday night dwindled considerably, however, when it was announced Hughes had not left Paris until 1.24 a m. (3 24 a. m. Moscow time).

Soviet experts gathered data on weather conditions in the interior and announced radio preparations for assisting the ship's flight between Moscow, across Siberia, into Alaska.

His planned route from Moscow was 2,281 miles to Krasnoyarsk, Siberia; a 1,277 mile hop to Yakutsk, Siberia; 2,456 miles to Fairbanks, Alaska, and then 3,380 miles to New York.

Hughes lifted his plane from Le Bourget Field, Paris, at 7:25 p. m. EST Monday, (1:24 a. m. Paris time) after minor repairs to the ship.

He had flown the first leg of the world girdling hop, from New York to Paris, in 16 hours 35 minutes to halve Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's flight time over the same course.

There was a moderate wind and a light drizzle at the takeoff in Paris and as they neared Moscow the fliers reported having passed through heavy rain, some of it cold enough to form ice.

There had been some concern in Paris because, although the takeoff seemed perfect, the plane's left wheel appeared to have been damaged.

Radio Engineer Richard Stoddart reported some hours later, however, that the landing gear was in normal position, and that "anything about damage to our landing gear is not true at all."

LOVE IN DANGER

CHAPTER II

What did she know about Frank Armstrong? He could be anything; the detective agency could be a blind for some crooked plot involving her aunt and herself. Her own small inheritance from her parent's estate wouldn't keep her in decent lingerie. Men wouldn't kidnap her for that, but they would think her Aunt Lucy, the wealthy Mrs. Judson Hopper Yates, would pay high ransom to protect her only niece.

All this supposition Ray quickly cast aside with the greatest of ease. It was unaccountable that she could do this, after her careful upbringing; after all her highly specialized tutors, the select schools she had attended, her extensive travels. There had been little of Aunt Lucy's supervision in all this, however. Decidedly little. The socially important Mrs. Yates, a charming widow of forty-seven, flitted from charity bazaar to tea, to dinner, to opera, when she was in town. She was willing to flirt a little, be admired a little by attentive, suave men during the season at Monte Carlo or the Riviera, or at Placid or Miami, or anywhere she happened to be in or out of season. Seldom did she care to feel hampered by the companionship of a beautiful young niece, although she was exceedingly fond of her.

Fortunately, Ray had had from childhood a poise far beyond her years, and frequently, it stood her in good stead when Aunt Lucy was not around and available for a confidential chat, but Ray hesitated to approach her concerning the Union Detective Agency. She felt it would be a calamity if her aunt vetoed Frank Armstrong's suggestion, yet she was annoyed at herself for being so stubborn about keeping that appointment.

She was impelled purely by curiosity? Or—and it made sweet singing in her heart—was it the man himself?

It had rained in the night and the spicy smell of wet foliage, together with the sweet paleness of morning sunlight, sent Ray's spirits soaring as she drove her tan roadster away from her aunt's stately Spanish town house. Even the sparrows chattered with new energy foolishly unmindful of chilly weather soon to arrive. A red squirrel scampered up a tree at the car's approach, began munching a nut, eyed Ray furtively; a car wheel brushed a drooping hydrangea, bringing a regretful "Oh!" from Ray at the scattering of pinkish petals. All nature was pal to her. She loved every blade of grass, every leaf, stone and flower on Aunt Lucy's expensively landscaped city lawn. She loved the funny little crickets, the poeyed toads; every little bug was a rare treasure requiring her protection.

Half an hour later, she was gazing into a pair of moss-brown eyes across a big mahogany desk, both eyes and desk belonging to James Roper, head of the Union Detective Agency. He was a slightly awe-inspiring man in a badly rumpled suit, unlike any man she had ever encountered before. He was middle-aged, short and stout. His blue jowls contracted oddly with the fat black cigar he was chewing, which somehow lent him a ferocious look. So did his bushy dark brows beneath his choppy black hair.

The instant he spoke, however, all Ray's fears vanished. His voice entirely belied his appearance, made him a kindly man in whom one could place entire confidence.

"Sit down, Miss Hunt," he invited. "Frank Armstrong told me about you."

Ray seated herself in a worn brown leather chair, her blue eyes wide with interest. Never before had she seen a man who could talk with a cigar dangling loosely from his lips. He would make a star ventriloquist, she thought, somewhat amused.

"Did he?" she said noncommittally.

Thumbs anchored in vest armholes, James Roper leaned back in his swivel-chair and thoroughly scrutinized his visitor. It was a scrutiny that went far beyond any physical beauty she might possess. She felt that her dependability was being accurately gauged.

Suddenly, he barked out, "Armstrong said you could be trusted."

She flinched inwardly but gave no sign. This Frank Armstrong had certainly taken a great deal for granted. Well—she mustn't disappoint him.

"I hope I can—be trusted," she got out, a trifle weakly.

Mr. Roper switched the cigar to the other side of his mouth without taking his gaze from her. He seemed to be considering something.

He took the cigar from his mouth, said "This work I have for you would be strictly confidential. You understand—not even your aunt must know."

She sat up straighter.

"You know my aunt?" she asked eagerly.

His brown eyes shifted abruptly to the window. He seemed to be contemplating the red tile roof of the adjoining office building. He cleared his throat and, still avoiding her glance, replied, "Not—socially. But I know she's a lady who might not like mixing up her niece in—that is, her niece working from this office. Although," he got up and strode to the window, stood with his back to Ray, "she might thank me in the end."

For a flashing instant, Ray wondered if this work he wished her to do in any way concerned her aunt. Then abruptly she flung such a thought aside as sheer nonsense. Nothing serious ever touched Aunt Lucy. Her attorney, Mark Goodrich, attended to all annoying affairs, allowing Aunt Lucy to live on the foamy crest of the social wave without worry. Yet why should Aunt Lucy ever take the trouble to thank Mr. Roper? What did he mean by saying that?

"May I ask—what it is you'd like me to do, Mr. Roper?"

There was an edge of excitement in her voice, difficult to conceal. She felt intoxicated by the shadow of coming events, for no sane reason at all. It was the most ridiculous thing she had ever heard of.

Mr. Roper wheeled about, came to sit before her on the desk, one leg thrown over its corner.

"What you are about to do may seem simple—but to me it's important—very important. I want a report on everything you do, on every place you visit—on the people there—and what they're doing and saying."

She laughed with relief.

"It sounds more like a reporter's job than anything. I could do it easily, of course."

"But mind you—I must have all the scandal, too—the gossip that's going the rounds among people you know. I must have—everything.

Her eyes widened with suspicion.

"You couldn't, I suppose, explain—tell me what this is all about? You see. If I tell you some things—it might betray confidences—my friends—"

"This is a cold-blooded proposition, Miss Hunt. You can't think of yourself as betraying friends. What you tell us will never go out of this office. I shall remember only what information I can use. Ultimately, you might be glad you did expose certain scandal—and your friends, too. It's a matter of tremendous weight we're trying to solve. We've needed a person like you for some time to up us off to what's going on behind the scenes with the high-steppers in this town. It's often more difficult to get information about society folks than professional crooks. You'd be doing this concern a big favor. We'll give you fifty a week—if you make good. You'll give us a daily report."

He shoved the fat cigar back into his mouth.

Ray hesitated. Fifty a week would make her feel independent. It would be the first money she had ever earned, yet—to tell this man all the secrets of her crowd—

"I wouldn't be offering you the job if Armstrong hadn't vouched for you," Mr. Roper added reflectively.

Frank Armstrong had vouched for her, a girl he had just met! suddenly, she resolved to see this peculiar business through to the finish. If she got into a jam—Frank Armstrong could drag her out! And for some inexplicable reason, she knew he would be perfectly capable of doing so.

"Very well, Mr. Roper," she said resolutely. "I'll—I'll do my best. I'll report to you every—"

"Better not do that." He got to his feet in an attitude of dismissal. "It will be safer to report to Armstrong. That will mean you'll have to get him invited around—make him seem a friend of yours,

She colored faintly and stood up, her heart beating unaccountably fast.

"Yes—certainly. I'll be willing to do that."

"He's a keen young man—going places," said Mr. Roper, opening the door for her.

"I think so, too," she said. Then wondered why she had, and scolded herself for it all the way down in the elevator.

That evening, for the first time in weeks, Ray and her Aunt Lucy dined at home without guests. Ray had heretofore welcomed the opportunity to discuss personal matters with her elusive relative, who was generally too busy with her engagements to play at being parent. But tonight Ray had no desire to become confidential. She sat stiffly erect, consumed with nerves.

The massive mahogany table-top gleamed through precious Italian cut-work; rare old silver and exquisitely cut crystal gleamed on the table's length and breath, a ridiculous expanse of gleam for only two women. Jarvis, the correctly mannered English butler, after bringing in puree of tomato in fragile china cups, stood at attention behind Aunt Lucy's chair.

"That will be all for the present, Jarvis," she said.

Ray gave her aunt a startled glance. "You're not wearing the pearl necklace tonight, auntie! Why, I've never seen that gorgeous for a ball without that gorgeous heirloom!"

Lucy Yates colored faintly, looked down at the unadorned bosom of her low-cut green lace evening gown. "Yes—I know. I was hoping you wouldn't miss it. The truth is—the necklace has—disappeared. I didn't want to worry you—I know how you loved it—and it was to have been yours some day."

"It's—you mean—it's been stolen?" gasped out Ray breathlessly.

FALLS 40 FEET; UNHURT

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Three-year-old Shelia Hahn fell 40 feet from the window of her bedroom, but suffered no injuries. She was sitting on the window sill swinging her heels when the screen gave way and she fell to a concrete drive below.

STERN KNIGHT FROM THE NORTH CHANGES COURSE OF BABS' LIFE

This is the fifth of six articles on the life of Countess Barbara Hutton von Haugwitz-Reventlow by Helen Welshimer, well-known writer.

By HELEN WELSHIMER

NEW YORK CITY—One day after Barbara Hutton Mdivani received her divorce decree from Prince Alexis in Reno, Nev., she married again.

This time instead of a sports-loving prince from the East, she united her life with that of a sober Dane. But again it was nobility. The dreams of her childhood could not be denied.

This well-behaved man did not go in for fast horses and fast motor cars. He had a scholarly disposition. He was 17 years older than Barbara, sedate, home-loving, but possessed of the charm which she always had sought.

An Anchor.

He desired to establish a home and lineage. He did not belong to the fast-living international social crowd that swarms to St. Moritz and the Lido. He seemed to be the anchor Princess Babbs needed after the storms of her early twenties.

Barbara, it must be said, never went in for title-bearing tramps. Mdivani's family line was not questioned. He had reasonable wealth in his own right and he did not need to play the market for an American heiress.

Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow persuaded Barbara to settle down in an establishment in London.

But during her honeymoon she once against was snatched back to brutal reality. Mdivani was killed—killed at 80 miles an hour in one of his custom-made cars as he drove a guest of his sister's to a train in France.

In Seclusion for Weeks.

When his will was read, Barbara found herself heir to one-third of his estate. She went into seclusion for weeks in the midst of her honeymoon. Her first knight was dead.

After meeting the international crowd, Barbara had started to trim down the buxom lines of a well-fed American heiress. In two years she lost 42 pounds.

Then she was confined. That was two years ago. She was to give birth to a son with a noble title. Dreams coming true, we might say. But she nearly paid for it with her life. She dipped into violent reality again. For days she lay between life and death.

Her ever-loyal father hastened to her side. The great doctors of England, the most successful obstetricians, were called into consultation. They knew she could not give birth normally. A Caesarean delivery was decided upon.

Lance Is Born.

So Barbara had the son of the count. They called him Lance. Even this name is suggestive of something in an early romance that his mother may have read in those little-girl years.

Lance, too, came into a world of wealth that waited for him. He had his own flat in the London mansion. There were three living rooms, and two bathrooms with heated towel rails.

Now the noble strain was established. Frank Woolworth's throne-like office had passed from Gothic embellishments and gilded plaster into flesh and blood.

ELECTRICIAN FACES ARREST IN BOMB CASE

Warrant Issued at Ashland Charges Nova Suspect With Possession of Explosives.

(By Staff Correspondent)

ASHLAND—A warrant for the arrest of Roman Trocki, a Nova electrician, was sworn out today by Deputy Sheriff Dale Hammond, who has been investigating the attempted bombing of the Topping warehouse here on June 14.

The warrant charges Trocki with illegal possession of explosives. Sheriff Wallett said the charges were drawn against the Nova man after nearly a month of secret investigation by the sheriff's office and A. Ross Siverling, Ashland county prosecutor.

While he declined to reveal how the suspect had been tracked down, Wallett said he was certain that the man had had the explosives in his possession. He said it had not yet been established where the purchase was made.

The sheriff added that his investigation disclosed that Trocki was missing from his home on the same day the bomb made from six quarts of nitro-glycerine and 12 sticks of dynamite was found planted beside the Topping warehouse in downtown Ashland.

It also has been definitely established, Wallett said, that Trocki went to Michigan on the same day. He said Mrs. Trocki could not be located although she had not left her home with her husband.

He said that Trocki who is of foreign extraction, operated a shop near Nova for the past several years. He is not a naturalized citizen although he has filed papers declaring his intentions of becoming a citizen.

The bomb, with a 30-foot partially burned fuse, was found beside the warehouse used to store foodstuffs sent by plane last summer to Republic Steel plants during the little steel strike in the Mahoning valley.

First investigation was made by Ashland police and later agents of the F. B. I. in Cleveland were called. Authorities at the time said the powerful charge was enough to have blown up the entire downtown section.

FATHER OF FIVE ENDS OWN LIFE

Anton Stirtzinger Found in Basement; Had Hanged Self From Pipe.

Apparently despondent, a 65-year-old father of five children yesterday ended his life in the basement of his home by hanging himself from a gas pipe with a bed sheet.

The body of Anton Stirtzinger, 375 Third avenue, was found suspended from the pipe by a son about a half hour after his father had gone to the basement.

County Coroner Hugh C. Winbigler gave a verdict of suicide, and gave despondency as the reason for the act.

Police said that Mr. Stirtzinger had been to Cleveland with a son and another friend yesterday and had seemed in normal spirits. The party arrived in Mansfield shortly after 8 p. m. Mr. Stirtzinger went to the basement while the son visited neighbors. A search later revealed his body hanging from the pipe.

Born in Austria-Hungary, Dec. 11, 1872, Mr. Stirtzinger came to Mansfield in 1905. He was employed at the Ohio Brass company for 19 years.

Mr. Stirtzinger was widely known in music circles and was a member of various Mansfield musical organizations.

He was a member of the St. John Evangelical Lutheran church brotherhood, German Benevolent union, Woodmen of America and German Sick Benefit association.

Surviving are his wife, Katherine; three sons, John, Philip and Steve; two daughters, Mrs. Paul Jerger and Mrs. Joseph Hetler, all of Mansfield, a brother, John of Detroit, and 12 grandchildren.

The body was removed to the Geiger funeral home. Arrangements are not complete.

Statler Millionaire or Pauper?

When this photo was taken of Ellsworth M. Statler, heir to the hotel fortune, and his bride, Barbara, former $85-a-month dentist's assistant in Hollywood, love ran smoothly, but their relations are not so amicable now. His estranged wife is asking Statler for a separate maintenance of $1,500 a month, a sum which he said in court he was unable to pay. His attitude implied that he was very hazy about the exact state of his finances and his most definite statement was to the effect that he had $9.08 in the bank on deposit. He denied he had annual income of $100,000 as contended by his wife.

OCEAN-FLYING PIONEER HERE

Chamberlin Cruises Over City as Hughes Dashes for Moscow.

a 200-horsepower engine with a maximum speed of 125 miles an hour. Hughes' two super-charged motors develop 2,200 horsepower and he's flying at more than 200 miles an hour. He has equipment that keeps him in constant touch with land and with ships at sea. There was no means of communication on my plane; when we cut loose out over the Atlantic, we were entirely cut off from the rest of the world.

"And I had to stick as close to the wheel as a motorist," he continued. "What I mean, I had to pilot every minute of the trip. The Hughes plane is equipped with an automatic pilot. He could set his plane for Paris as he left New York and he could almost land there without changing his steering equipment. He is equipped with a radio compass which permits him to tune in on any broadcasting station in the world simply by turning a dial. The refinements in radio in the last few years have advanced aviation immeasureably. Flying equipment now is down to near perfection."

"Then why," he was asked, "do the best pilots still crack-up? Why do we still have air tragedies?

"The one thing we can't improve," he answered, "is the weather. I'd say at least 95 per cent of all plane accidents are due to weather conditions. That's I believe the future of aviation lies in stratosphere flying. Flying at an altitude of 35,000 feet, in a sealed cabin and with super-charged motors, the pilot has neither storm, wind, clouds nor mountain peaks to fear. I'm working on an engine now designed for flying at an altitude of approximately 40,000 feet. I believe stratosphere flying will remove all danger from weather conditions, and even now mechanical trouble on the plane has been reduced to where it causes only a small per cent of accidents, so that stratosphere flying should make flying 95 per cent safer than it is now."

Chamberlin commented on Mansfield's need of an airport with hard runways, in view of the new mail lines which the government plans.

"You need some person interested in aviation as a director of your airport, and a little money each year for maintenance," he said. You could probably get most of the money from the federal government for improving it."

The pioneer of the airways is visiting relatives while in the vicinity. He is a nephew of Fred I. Chamberlin of Lucas and a cousin of Ralph Chamberlin, News-Journal employe. The noted flyer came to Mansfield in 1928 when funds were raised to purchase the land for the airport.

HELD TO JURY

Elks Club Burglary Suspect Arraigned in Court.

Pleading innocent when arraigned before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch in municipal court today on a charge of breaking and entering Thomas Cantrell, 26, colored, of 263 North Adams street, waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bond.

Cantrell was arrested by detectives yesterday and charged with burglarizing the Elks club Saturday night. Brought to the station the man denied any knowledge of the crime.

However, after Dr. Paul Baird, assistant city-county health commissioner fitted a piece of flesh, which had been found on a window sill at the club, on Cantrell's injured finger and announced "it is a perfect fit," he admitted he had entered the club through a rear window shortly after it had closed at 11 p. m. Saturday, police said.

E. C. Fuller, identification expert, who found the bit of flesh during his investigation at the club said nothing had been taken although an attempt had been made to break open a vending machine.

HUGHES ROARING OVER SIBERIA

Speed Fliers Reach Moscow From Paris in 7 Hours, Rush on to Omsk.

port officials, waving aside all offers of food and drink as his companions ate a lunch of fried eggs, cold ham and salami served with beer and ice water in the airport dining room.

Reports of good weather were received from points along the Siberian route as far as the Bering Straits, separating Russian territory from Alaska.

Hughes planned to make his only other Siberian landing, besides Omsk, at Yakutsk, 2,100 miles to the east. However, Soviet authorities provided him with maps showing seven other airdomes and emergency landing places.

Return to Port.

Hughes and his comrades got off from Moscow only after one unsuccessful attempt, which was defeated by a change in direction of the wind. But they finally cleared the field with a heavy fuel load.

Their flying time for the 1,541 miles from Paris was 7 hours and 49 minutes, and they refueled at once for the next hop of 1,624 miles to Omsk, in their effort to beat the world record of 7 days, 18 hours and 49 minutes set by Wiley Post in 1933. Weather indications were adverse winds the first 1,000 miles with a favorable breeze after that.

Representatives of the American embassy and Alexander Troyanovsky, the Soviet ambassador to Washington who is home on leave, were in the crowd that watched the silver ship glide to a perfect landing out of the cloudless, summer sky.

Hughes said the flight from Paris was smooth but at high altitude. Radio Engineer Richard N. Stoddard explained they encountered icing conditions over France, compelling them to climb to 15,000 feet. "We were using oxygen tanks part of the time," he said.

The airport was all ready for the airmen. Two rooms were set aside for them, one for rest and another for eating. A meal had been ready for hours and the Russians' earnest effort to supply ice-water, without which Americans say they cannot live here, kept waiters busy.

Ice cubes in water glasses on the luncheon table had been renewed no less than six times while the welcomers awaited their guests.

A crowd of spectators jammed the dining room and watched while the fliers tried to snatch a quick lunch.

Georgi Baidukoff, one of the Russian polar fliers, greeted Hughes with the remark "I'll see you in America," leading to speculation whether he was contemplating another flight soon.

Mikhail Gromoff and Andrei Yumosheff, others of the polar crew, also were in the crowd.

Post's flight to Moscow in 1933, via Berlin rather than Paris, required an elapsed time of 50 hours and 10 minutes from New York. He was in the air 35½ hours, and his distance at the Moscow point was 4,933 miles.

Hughes at Moscow was 32 hours and 53 minutes out of New York, having flown 5,151 miles with a total time in the air of 24 hours and 24 minutes.

Post broke his Berlin-Moscow hop with a stop at Koenigsberg, 340 miles from Berlin and 651 from Moscow. He flew the 991 miles in two hops in 9 hours and 45 minutes.

A 2,500 gallon tank car of gasoline had been rolled on to the airport early this morning, and a special ground crew was ready to start refueling at once.

Americans Welcome Fliers.

Members of the American colony shared their automobiles for the trip to the airport to welcome the fliers. The crowd which gathered at the field Monday night dwindled considerably, however, when it was announced Hughes had not left Paris until 1:24 a. m. (3.24 a. m. Moscow time).

Soviet experts gathered data on weather conditions in the interior and announced radio preparations for assisting the ship's flight between Moscow, across Siberia, into Alaska.

His planned route from Moscow was 2,281 miles to Krasnoyarsk, Siberia; a 1,277 mile hop to Yakutsk, Siberia; 2,456 miles to Fairbanks, Alaska, and then 3,380 miles to New York.

Hughes lifted his plane from Le Bourget Field, Paris, at 7:25 p. m. EST Monday, (1:24 a. m. Paris time) after minor repairs to the ship.

He had flown the first leg of the world girdling hop, from New York to Paris, in 16 hours 35 minutes to halve Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's flight time over the same course.

There was a moderate wind and a light drizzle at the takeoff in Paris and as they neared Moscow the fliers reported having passed through heavy rain, some of it cold enough to form ice.

There had been some concern in Paris because, although the takeoff seemed perfect, the plane's left wheel appeared to have been damaged.

Radio Engineer Richard Stoddart reported some hours later, however, that the landing gear was in normal position, and that "anything about damage to our landing gear is not true at all."

RITES FOR BABY GIRL

SHELBY — Funeral services were held this morning at the Dick and Dye Funeral Home for the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hartman, 63 Auburn street, who died at the Memorial hospital here Monday evening. Burial was in the Oakland cemetery.

LOVE IN DANGER

By KATHRYN BEMIS

(Copyright, 1938)

CHAPTER II

What did she know about Frank Armstrong? He could be anything; the detective agency could be a blind for some crooked plot involving her aunt and herself. Her own small inheritance from her parent's estate wouldn't keep her in decent lingerie. Men wouldn't kidnap her for that, but they would think her Aunt Lucy, the wealthy Mrs. Judson Hopper Yates, would pay high ransom to protect her only niece.

All this supposition Ray quickly cast aside with the greatest of ease. It was unaccountable that she could do this, after her careful upbringing; after all her highly specialized tutors, the select schools she had attended, her extensive travels. There had been little of Aunt Lucy's supervision in all this, however. Decidedly little. The socially important Mrs. Yates, a charming widow of forty-seven, flitted from charity bazaar to tea, to dinner, to opera, when she was in town. She was willing to flirt a little, be admired a little by attentive, suave men during the season at Monte Carlo or the Riviera, or at Placid or Miami, or anywhere she happened to be in or out of season. Seldom did she care to feel hampered by the companionship of a beautiful young niece, although she was exceedingly fond of her.

Fortunately, Ray had had from childhood a poise far beyond her years, and frequently, it stood her in good stead when Aunt Lucy was not around and available for a confidential chat, but Ray hesitated to approach her concerning the Union Detective Agency. She felt it would be a calamity if her aunt vetoed Frank Armstrong's suggestion, yet she was annoyed at herself for being so stubborn about keeping that appointment.

She was impelled purely by curiosity? Or—and it made sweet singing in her heart—was it the man himself?

It had rained in the night and the spicy smell of wet foliage, together with the sweet paleness of morning sunlight, sent Ray's spirits soaring as she drove her tan roadster away from her aunt's stately Spanish town house. Even the sparrows chattered with new energy foolishly unmindful of chilly weather soon to arrive. A red squirrel scampered up a tree at the car's approach, began munching a nut, eyed Ray furtively; a car wheel brushed a drooping hydrangea, bringing a regretful "Oh!" from Ray at the scattering of pinkish petals. All nature was pal to her. She loved every blade of grass, every leaf, stone and flower on Aunt Lucy's expensively landscaped city lawn. She loved the funny little crickets, the poeyed toads; every little bug was a rare treasure requiring her protection.

Half an hour later, she was gazing into a pair of moss-brown eyes across a big mahogany desk, both eyes and desk belonging to James Roper, head of the Union Detective Agency. He was a slightly awe-inspiring man in a badly rumpled suit, unlike any man she had ever encountered before. He was middle-aged, short and stout. His blue jowls contracted oddly with the fat black cigar he was chewing, which somehow lent him a ferocious look. So did his bushy dark brows beneath his choppy black hair.

The instant he spoke, however, all Ray's fears vanished. His voice entirely belied his appearance, made him a kindly man in whom one could place entire confidence.

"Sit down, Miss Hunt," he invited. "Frank Armstrong told me about you."

Ray seated herself in a worn brown leather chair, her blue eyes wide with interest. Never before had she seen a man who could talk with a cigar dangling loosely from his lips. He would make a star ventriloquist, she thought, somewhat amused.

"Did he?" she said noncommittally.

Thumbs anchored in vest armholes, James Roper leaned back in his swivel-chair and thoroughly scrutinized his visitor. It was a scrutiny that went far beyond any physical beauty she might possess. She felt that her dependability was being accurately gauged.

Suddenly, he barked out, "Armstrong said you could be trusted."

She flinched inwardly but gave no sign. This Frank Armstrong had certainly taken a great deal for granted. Well—she mustn't disappoint him.

"I hope I can—be trusted," she got out, a trifle weakly.

Mr. Roper switched the cigar to the other side of his mouth without taking his gaze from her. He seemed to be considering something.

He took the cigar from his mouth, said "This work I have for you would be strictly confidential. You understand—not even your aunt must know."

She sat up straighter.

"You know my aunt?" she asked eagerly.

His brown eyes shifted abruptly to the window. He seemed to be contemplating the red tile roof of the adjoining office building. He cleared his throat and, still avoiding her glance, replied, "Not—socially. But I know she's a lady who might not like mixing up her niece in—that is, her niece working from this office. Although," he got up and strode to the window, stood with his back to Ray, "she might thank me in the end."

For a flashing instant, Ray wondered if this work he wished her to do in any way concerned her aunt. Then abruptly she flung such a thought aside as sheer nonsense. Nothing serious ever touched Aunt Lucy. Her attorney, Mark Goodrich, attended to all annoying affairs, allowing Aunt Lucy to live on the foamy crest of the social wave without worry. Yet why should Aunt Lucy ever take the trouble to thank Mr. Roper? What did he mean by saying that?

"May I ask—what it is you'd like me to do, Mr. Roper?"

There was an edge of excitement in her voice, difficult to conceal. She felt intoxicated by the shadow of coming events, for no sane reason at all. It was the most ridiculous thing she had ever heard of.

Mr. Roper wheeled about, came to sit before her on the desk, one leg thrown over its corner.

"What you are about to do may seem simple—but to me it's important—very important. I want a report on everything you do, on every place you visit—on the people there—and what they're doing and saying."

She laughed with relief.

"It sounds more like a reporter's job than anything. I could do it easily, of course."

"But mind you—I must have all the scandal, too—the gossip that's going the rounds among people you know. I must have—everything."

Her eyes widened with suspicion.

"You couldn't, I suppose, explain—tell me what this is all about? You see, if I tell you some things—it might betray confidences—my friends—"

"This is a cold-blooded proposition, Miss Hunt. You can't think of yourself as betraying friends. What you tell us will never go out of this office. I shall remember only what information I can use. Ultimately, you might be glad you did expose certain scandal—and your friends, too. It's a matter of tremendous weight we're trying to solve. We've needed a person like you for some time to tip us off to what's going on behind the scenes with the high-steppers in this town. It's often more difficult to get information about society folks than professional crooks. You'd be doing this concern a big favor. We'll give you fifty a week—if you make good. You'll give us a daily report."

He shoved the fat cigar back into his mouth.

Ray hesitated. Fifty a week would make her feel independent. It would be the first money she had ever earned, yet—to tell this man all the secrets of her crowd—

"I wouldn't be offering you the job if Armstrong hadn't vouched for you," Mr. Roper added reflectively.

Frank Armstrong had vouched for her, a girl he had just met! suddenly, she resolved to see this peculiar business through to the finish. If she got into a jam—Frank Armstrong could drag her out! And for some inexplicable reason, she knew he would be perfectly capable of doing so.

"Very well, Mr. Roper," she said resolutely. "I'll—I'll do my best. I'll report to you every—"

"Better not do that." He got to his feet in an attitude of dismissal. "It will be safer to report to Armstrong. That will mean you'll have to get him invited around—make him seem a friend of yours."

She colored faintly and stood up, her heart beating unaccountably fast.

"Yes—certainly. I'll be willing to do that."

"He's a keen young man—going places," said Mr. Roper, opening the door for her.

"I think so, too," she said. Then wondered why she had, and scolded herself for it all the way down in the elevator.

That evening, for the first time in weeks, Ray and her Aunt Lucy dined at home without guests. Ray had heretofore welcomed the opportunity to discuss personal matters with her elusive relative, who was generally too busy with her engagements to play at being parent. But tonight Ray had no desire to become confidential. She sat stiffly erect, consumed with nerves.

The massive mahogany table-top gleamed through precious Italian cut-work; rare old silver and exquisitely cut crystal gleamed on the table's length and breath, a ridiculous expanse of gleam for only two women. Jarvis, the correctly mannered English butler, after bringing in puree of tomato in fragile china cups, stood at attention behind Aunt Lucy's chair.

"That will be all for the present, Jarvis," she said.

Ray gave her aunt a startled glance. "You're not wearing the pearl necklace tonight, auntie! Why, I've never seen that gorgeous for a ball without that gorgeous heirloom!"

Lucy Yates colored faintly, looked down at the unadorned bosom of her low-cut green lace evening gown. "Yes—I know. I was hoping you wouldn't miss it. The truth is—the necklace has—disappeared. I didn't want to worry you—I know how you loved it—and it was to have been yours some day."

"It's—you mean—it's been stolen?" gasped out Ray breathlessly.

TUESDAY JULY 12, 1938.

Actuaries say people live longer in hard times—anyhow, it seems longer.

It may be noted that few, if any, complaints about "speed traps" come from careful drivers who conform to reasonable traffic regulations.

Governor Lehman, of New York, has changed a left-over Roosevelt deficit into a surplus in the state treasury—but his radio voice isn't so good.

Ignoring of White Resented.

LONGEST continued reverberation of President Roosevelt's Marietta visit promises to be his slighting of former Governor George White and at the same time, as head of the Democratic party, putting in a good word for Senator Bulkley, who is being opposed by White for second term nomination.

Except as Senator Bulkley has willingly taken place among the "rubber stamp" senators who have supported all Roosevelt policies, regardless of merit, Ohio Democrats can see no justification for such meddling in a state contest which they regard themselves as entirely capable of settling.

It appears merely that George White, like Senator Vic Donahey, is a man who prefers to think for himself, and that, as governor and afterward he has been "happy to support the New Deal in every proper way."

Senator Bulkley announces that he is running on his record, which includes support of the president's supreme court packing proposal, the dangerously dictatorial reorganization bill, and a vote to confirm the appointment of Hugo Black, of Ku Klux Klan notoriety, to the supreme court bench.

While it was necessarily as "head of the Democratic party" that Mr. Roosevelt threw his influence to Senator Bulkley, the voice noted by the audience was that of the President of the United States—attempting to tell Ohio Democrats how they should vote.

In any event the occurrence serves to arouse increased interest in a primary that was beginning to show signs of bogging down from the heat.

Aftermath of Auto Accident.

A DAMAGE suit just filed in common pleas court here will attract more than ordinary public interest on account of circumstances involved and a phase of driver-liability which it brings up for court determination.

During the course of an automobile ride one night last October a Mansfield young woman was injured in a crash in which another occupant of the car was killed.

In the suit just filed against the driver of the car, damages of $25,000 are asked, it being averred in the petition that the defendant "insisted on driving, although he was intoxicated, and that as a result of his negligence, the car crashed into a telephone pole."

Whatever the outcome of the court action may be, the incident can scarcely fail to provide an additional object lesson on various disagreeable features of an automobile accident, aside from the immediate consequences.

Michigan's 'Proud' Record.

MICHIGAN'S Governor Murphy was much disturbed last week when his state's 108-year record of no legal executions was broken by the federal government's execution of a man who committed murder during an attempted bank robbery.

Over the same week-end two killers who were serving life terms in a Michigan prison made their escape after threatening the life of a trusty.

One of the escaped lifers confessed killing his father and step-mother. The other pleaded guilty to murder of a patrolman.

Whether in prison, or during the period of their freedom after an escape, such men are a constant menace to other people. They would take other lives without hesitation.

Michigan may at some time realize the advisability of restoring the death penalty, or at least make it a capital offense to commit another murder in attempts of lifers to escape prison.

Not So Easy for Thieves.

GREATER protection of farmers and suburban residents from theft of live stock and poultry, as provided in Ohio's new "rustlers" law, is a piece of legislation that will be appreciated by many who have heretofore been helpless victims of this form of thievery.

Since those earlier days in which vigilantes dealt summary punishment to horse thieves and cattle rustlers, residents of rural sections have been the prey of thieves who raided poultry houses or made way with live stock, which could be disposed of with little likelihood of apprehension.

Under the new law, however, all purchases of livestock and fowls must be recorded in a way that discloses their source and makes apprehension of thieves a relatively simple matter.

Busy Summer for Travel.

THE travel industry is surprisingly good this summer. Reports from the American Express travel service and the Dow-Jones financial news service agree about that. The American people are traveling, playing and spending, in spite of depression. Many are prospering, and the general movement tends to scatter prosperity.

People who have the money, says Dow-Jones, show a tendency to get out and spend it while they can; they expect to be busier next summer. Few seem to expect the depression to last over into next year. The railroads expect patronage now greater than last year's; the bus lines are already doing better than they did a year ago; campers are more numerous and more widely distributed. Air vacations, too, are flourishing, and the steamer routes, after a slow start, are now active.

Travel is better than business in general, throughout the country, says the American Express service, and it expects a business upturn this month for American and Canadian railroads that will be a modest boom. For the rest of the summer, all forms of travel look good.

This will serve as preparation for the revival of industry, trade and employment that people are expecting in the fall.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

LACK OF outstanding candidates is likely to make the November election a dull affair, instead of the brilliant battle it was supposed to be. That is the public's loss.

A great to-do is made in metropolitan papers of the inability of New Dealers to put forth outstanding candidates in states where an anti-New Dealer is running for re-nomination. But the people of those states do not feel so happy regarding it. The people are not so much concerned with the New Deal and anti-New Deal aspect of the men, as their quality and ability. And that is not above medium on either side in the majority of contests.

A hotel barber brought this out vividly as he trimmed my hair in a state through which President Roosevelt was passing.

A BARBER'S VIEW

This is what the barber said:

"The president gave a light tap on the shoulder to Senator So-and-So. Too bad he isn't a better man. But you could close your eyes and make a choice of either of the two men running for the Democratic nomination—and the same with the Republican. There is no sense of public responsibility in any of them.

"It is a bad thing for the nation. But the political machine still rules. No man can win without it. And men who win through machines double-cross the people—or the machines won't let them win again.

"Roosevelt has been trying to smash the machines, but in every town and city, they still control, with few exceptions, I know. I shave many politicians, from the lowest to the highest. They laugh when they discuss it. It's a game with them—and a man who doesn't know their game cannot win. A man of fine capabilities won't mix in with them—except once in a while, when a Roosevelt and, yes, a Hoover comes along. But, in the end, the machine always on top."

SO WHAT?

Well, what's to be done?

"I'll tell you," said the barber. "Roosevelt must run again. Who else is there to fight for us?

"Third-term precedent? Nonsense! When the nation needs a man, then new precedent must be made. Is there any man in sight to take over the vast problems of the country? Are we to let ourselves go to smash because some reactionaries and opposition politicians cry, 'Precedent!' I am for Roosevelt for a third term because he does not live in the past—and I would vote for him even though I may vote for Republicans in the city and the state."

I have found that is not an isolated case. That is why I quote it.

VAN NUYS

The McNutt-Townsend machine in Indiana could not see victory ahead in November if it forced Senator Frederick Van Nuys, who fought President Roosevelt's supreme court bill, to run as an independent. Thus he is given the Democratic renomination. The machine had only a machine candidate to offer instead of Van Nuys.

Regardless of the New Deal or anti-New Deal fight in Indiana, the race now will be between a mediocre Democrat and a mediocre Republican (from a national point of view)—and the man elected will be in office six years. Those six years will be full of tremendous and intricate domestic and international problems.

The men themselves undoubtedly are leading citizens in their home communities, but when the nation needs giants they lack stature.

Thus it is in many another state.

U. S. Reorganization Basis Sought

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Just as President Roosevelt says, the country undoubtedly wants the executive branch of the government reorganized on a business basis.

Congress, at its last session, did not turn down proposed reorganization because there was any dispute on that score. The bill was shelved because so many of the lawmakers disapproved the kind of reorganization that the administration favored. If, as the president forecasts, the scheme is re-introduced when the legislators meet again, in a form acceptable to them, unquestionably it will go through a-kiting.

I am not sure that the issue can be made a very popularly exciting one. The present set-up is ridiculous, as w. l as terrible. However, its awful-ness is pretty well concentrated in Washington. Here we all realize how nearly impossible it is. I doubt that this is so well understood out in the country; so the country may not care so much.

But that the thing needs reorganization and simplification is indisputable.

THE TROUBLE.

The trouble is this:

Every time an emergency arises, some sort of a sub-administration is created to deal with it.

Such sub-administration survives on into near-eternity. Its emergency may pass. Some other agency may be established, to take over its functions. These outfits are overlapping or obsolete in dozens of different directions. But they provide jobs. Consequently it practically is impossible to abolish any one of them.

There are more than 100 administrations, commmissions, bureaus, boards and miscellaneous offices which could be compacted into half that many.

EACH HAS SUPPORTERS.

The difficulty is that it is nearly a hopeless undertaking to tackle these outfits one at a time. Each would have fighters in its favor. The succession of "scraps" would continue indefinitely.

General reorganization contemplates a grand jumbling, to be followed by a boiling-down process.

It is a program unavoidably involving an initial terrific conflict—all the little groups campaigning like fury, jointly, for the continuance of their collective existence. Still, it would be one contest—an interminable struggle against an everlasting another one.

NUB OF CLASH.

Two interests took the situation in hand:

1. A committee under the chairmanship of Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia—a committee which sought to put reorganization in congress' hands.

2. A committee under the chairmanship of Louis Brownlow, newspaperman and former city manager. This latter committee was of President Roosevelt's selection, and it undertook to put reorganization into the hands of the president.

That is the nub of the clash:

Who is to do the reorganizing? Congress or the president?

That is the nub of the clash:

PRESIDENT HANDICAPPED.

I will say frankly, I think that a one-man president can be counted on to act more efficiently than a 531-man congress.

Hitler and Mussolini do "get action."

The president of the United States is handicapped.

And he absolutely is right in asserting that our bureaucratic system urgently calls for reorganization.

ALL of US

—By MARSHALL MASLIN

I . . . I . . . I

I LIKE to be by myself occasionally, but if I am left too much alone—I begin to suspect that I'm being neglected.

I want to be liked for myself—but ask me to describe that self I wouldn't know how to do it.

I don't mind criticism — but please don't be too harsh, too frank in your opinion of me.

Often I am haunted by the conviction that I have not returned to life nearly as much as I have received from it.

When I forget a name or a face or something I have known for many a year, I wonder if that does not mean I am "getting old"...but I know that age has nothing to do with such forgetfulness.

I don't mind an occasional bit of fresh gossip...Why should I?

I say that I don't like to boast, but in fact I do like to boast while I hope I am doing it so cleverly that no one can fairly accuse me of it.

Sometimes I say I wish I didn't have to work, but in my heart I know that loafing would finally become excruciating torture, deadened at last into misery. (Ask any man who has been out of work for a long period of time.)

I would be wonderful if I could keep all my good resolutions and attain the perfection that is in my daydreams ..But the strain would be terrible.

I like compliments...Even if I suspect that the compliment isn't sincere, it's better than nothing. The flatterer has at least cared enough to wish to please me.

I wonder how my prejudices succeed in maintaining themselves so well without visible means of support.

I have known some bad men who have been a better influence for good than some good men I have known.

How "Certified Milk" Started.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SEVERAL inquiries, both by mail and in person seem to indicate that there is some confusion as to what certified milk is. In these summer months, when a good milk supply is so necessary for the health of the family, especially the baby, a recognition of the virtues of certified milk should be common knowledge.

Certified milk represents the pinacle of art and science in the dairy industry. "Certified" milk means that a long list of exacting conditions have been faithfully carried out, resulting in a milk so good that a county medical society is willing to certify to its qualities.

The idea of certified milk came from the mind of Dr. Henry L. Coit of Newark, N. J., after he had lost his small daughter in a milk-borne epidemic in 1888. He found, after some difficulties, dairymen who would follow his rules for clean milk production. About 1894 the plan was working in that one locality, and soon other medical milk commissions were formed.

The rules which these commissions enforce are many and rigorous. They fill a pamphlet of 16 closely-printed pages.

First general principle is a healthy herd and a herd selected for the quality of its milk. The cows are fed rations of vitamins and minerals. In the milking stables each cow must have 600 cubic feet of air space.

Health Checked.

The health of all the dairy employes is checked regularly.

Extraordinary precautions are taken to obtain clean, germ-free milk. The milking stables are kept almost like operating rooms. Visitors are limited to avoid contamination. Milkers must not permit their fingers to touch the milk—they touch nothing except the clean top of the milking stool, the milk pail and the cow's teats. Approved apparatus for the sterilization of bottles and utensils is required, and a laboratory capable of making frequent bacteriologic examinations must be on hand. The construction of the milk pails is specified, and the water supply is frequently checked by bacteriologic examination.

Under these circumstances a milk of the highest dietary value, as well as cleanliness and safety, is produced. Certified milk can be obtained raw, pasteurized or as Vitamin D certified milk.

There are nearly 100 medical commissions certifying milk in the United States today. Naturally the milk is more expensive than other milk, but not proportionately so, considering all the care that has been expended on it.

How Much of Yourself Have You Lost?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

REMEMBER the person you were in your 'teens and twenties?

That curious, confident young Self . . . rarin' to go . . . full of tall dreams . . . ablaze with enthusiasm?

There were so many things you wanted to be; so many things you might have been; so many knacks and talents that waited development. Remember how you almost decided to take up law . . . Or how eager you were to be an interior decorator? Music, engineering, painting, journalism, scientific research . . . like far voices calling . . . like other Selves clamoring . . . they swept through your blood.

How rich Life was! How rich YOU were, with all those quickening interests, those stirring talents! What wonders the future would hold as, one by one, you answered those calls, developed those interests and latent abilities.

But now you've entered that future. There are more years behind, perhaps, than ahead. And what has come of all that proud, bright dreaming? How much of that rich, young Self remains . . . those colorful interests . . . those hidden talents?

You don't answer. Has the question startled, shocked you? And do you try to calm your inner dismay by saying that "there's still plenty of time? I've been so busy earning a living. But I'm just as interested in all those other things as I ever was. And—just you wait! One of these days I'll show 'em!"

BUT WILL YOU? HOW MUCH IS THERE LEFT TO SHOW? OR IS THERE ONLY MOCKING SILENCE IN PLACE OF THAT LONG-LOST SONG?

A grim question . . . but soon or late, it stalks into every life. And often those whom the world holds most successful, face it with the darkest despair.

Dean Gresham of San Francisco—wise servant of God and dearly loved friend of man—speaks of this bitter wakening in that small, rare book he has built, called "WINGS OF HEALING." We'll mention that book often in this column for, whether you're a churchman or not, here's help you've been needing. As you will realize from this one quotation:

"Charles Darwin in one of his letters tells us out of his own experience how faculties may be lost through disuse. ... ...

..."He says that 'Shakespeare, whom he once took great delight in, eventually became so intolerably dull to him that even the finest of the plays positively distressed him.' Besides, he lost his taste for music and art, as well as for poetry. He says that 'his mind became a kind of machine for grinding out general laws from large collections of facts'; and that 'this seemed to have atrophied that part of the brain upon which the higher tastes depend.'

"And then he tells us 'that if he had to live his life again he would make it a rule to read some poetry and to listen to some music at least once a week, so that the parts of the brain now atrophied would thus become active through use'."

Atrophied areas . . . mental "dust bowls" . . . You've wondered why life has become so dreary. That's why! Man was never designed to exist in the ghastly drabness that descends upon most of our lives. All of us, however limited our equipment may seem, were born with the makings of exciting, fruitful lives. But we have let those "makings" lie idle . . . forgotten and neglected them . . . let them mummify.

And it isn't only the knack for carpentry or journalism that we lose by disuse. There are, says Dean Gresham, "higher faculties" . . . hungers and powers that may not be expressed in wrought wood or written word . . . which may also be lost. That young idealism . . . that fresh, clear flame — "THE FACULTY FOR GOD" which also wanes.

How long is it since you climbed a hill to watch for the evening star? How long since you let your hand rest from its work, while your heart flowed out in a prayer?

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Burgess Meredith, about whom so many kind things have been written in the past, is figuring unhappily in the news at the moment. The young man who has been tagged as "The Hamlet of 1940" is facing divorce proceedings from his pretty wife, and already I hear his home at Stony Point, in the High Tor country of the Palisades, is up for sale.

There is quite a history to this house aside from the posies that were written about it when Meredith and his bride bought it a couple of years ago. Originally it was a farm house used by Lafayette as his headquarters during the Revolutionary war. It commands the rugged terrain on which the battle of Stony Point was fought.

Not long ago I happened to be driving by the place and was interested to find two cannon mounted in front of the house. This, I thought, if they were genuine Continental cannon, was a magnificent step towards rehabilitating Lafayette's old headquarters. And so I got out of the car and walked over to have a good look at them.

But they weren't real, and their position there was evidence of an actor's theatrical imagination. They were wooden, and the paint already was beginning to chip off. I am told Meredith purchased them at some theatrical house where props for dramas and pageants are sold.

IT MAY interest you to know that the game of croquet has taken a strangle hold on the imagination of a lot of people in this section of the country. Leagues have been formed and courts are in all the parks and playground centers.

Herbert Bayard Swope is said to be a maniac on the subject, and so is Alexander Woollcott. Swope even has a court that is flood-lighted, so he can play the game at night, and he defies anyone to call it a sissy's game.

A tragic story is that one about Don Quinn, the radio writer. He and his wife planned for years a new home overlooking the Bay in San Francisco. And they began work on it. Finally it was completed, and then, after dreaming and hoping for so much, they realized their wishes and started out to drive to San Francisco the other day. It was their first summer in their new home. But hardly had they got on the road when—like that—came the screech of brakes applied too late, the grind of gears, the crash. Don is now in a hospital in Chicago. His wife is dead.

DEFEND SALE OF 'DILUTED' GAS TO BUCKEYE CITIES

Engineers Tell Commission 'Stabilization' Necessary to Keep Prices Lower.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The Ohio Fuel Gas company's practice of diluting or "stabilizing" its natural gas supply, attacked in pending litigation, was defended in a report of three engineers in the hands of the state public utilities commission today.

The investigators were two members of the commission's engineering staff—L. F. Dabe and O. W. Simonton—and one Ohio State university professor, D. J. Demorest, head of the department of metallurgy in the engineering college.

Study Authorized.

They were assigned last November to study the company's process of mixing non-burnable gases with the natural gas before delivery to consumers. The utilities commission ordered the investigation after its attention had been called to the process by testimony in the Columbus gas rate case before the commission and by charges made by City Atty. John L. Davies of Columbus in a $42,000,000 damage suit against the gas company.

In contrast with city charges that "stabilization" lowers the quality of the gas supply and artificially inflates the price, the engineering board said it produces better gas and tends to keep prices lower.

Pointing out that the Ohio Fuel Gas company has 3200 wells of its own and buys from 2,500 others in Ohio as well as from West Virginia and Kentucky sources, the engineers insisted that "it is necessary to add a stabilizing agent to maintain the market gases nearer the point of perfect interchangeability."

3 KILLED BY WIND STORMS

Gales of Tornado Force Strike Sections of Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(INS)—Three men were dead today as result of tornado-like winds which swept sections of southwestern Indiana, doing damage estimated at $250,000.

The winds unroofed houses, schools and barns, uprooted trees and toppled telephone poles, leaving scores of cities and towns in darkness. Automobiles were crushed like egg shells by falling trees.

Charles Wolf, marshal of Orleans, was electrocuted when he came in contact with a high voltage wire while trying to clear debris from the streets.

from enforcing its ordinance, the board would pass an emergency measure and we would be no better off than at the beginning," Mowry said.

The protesting producers labeled as "unreasonable" the requirements in the ordinance which force them to use small top milk pails, change clothing before milking and build sanitary milk parlors.

Speaking at the session, M. R. Moomaw, manager of the Stark County Producers association, told the group that prices paid producers here are as high as any in the state and that the city's requirements are no more severe than in most of the larger population centers.

"You producers need to establish a closer relationship with the city through the Chamber of Commerce and service clubs," Moomaw said. "Get together around the conference table and talk over you differences instead of fighting each other," he advised.

"Some of you who criticize the grading of your raw milk forget that it takes more than modern equipment to produce quality milk. The producer's personal habits determine to a large extent the kind of product he markets," Moomaw said.

BIG VOTE SEEN

Primary Registration Sets Record, 20,000 Eligible.

A record registration of voters in Mansfield, totaling nearly 20,000 was reported today as county board of election officials checked new registrations following the exporation last night of the registration period.

A. F. Porter, clerk of the election board, said approximately 600 new registrations had been received since the last election. More than 19,200 were registered for the election last November.

Election officials saw in the heavy registration an indication of a big vote at the Aug. 9 primary.

Interest in the primary is believed to have been stimulated largely by a $550,000 school bond issue and two relief levies which will be submitted to voters.

"Sawyer represents the interests of the majority of Democrats who are dissatisfied with the Davey administration," Baer said. "Davey has forgotten the welfare of his party," the Sawyer leader added.

Head of the county Democratic executive committee for eight years and a veteran of many campaigns, Baer said he was stepping out of his usual role this year to battle a group in his own party in a primary campaign.

FBI CALLED IN PROBE OF OHIO KIDNAP THREATS

Construction Foreman Tells of Attack; Daughter, 4, Threatened in Notes.

(By Associated Press)

OXFORD—Reputed kidnap threats against his four-year-old daughter which culminated in an attack upon the construction foreman on Oxford's half-completed $60,000 postoffice and led today to an inquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

One of two unidentified colored men was believed to have been wounded during a gun-battle which followed.

R. E. Skidmore, the object of the attack, is employed by a Columbus building firm (Skilken Bros.) He told Marshal L. O. Grimes that the men accosted him in his apartment as he entered last night.

Gun Fails to Fire.

One pinned his arms, he said, while the other pointed a gun at him and pulled the trigger three times. Each time, the weapon missed fire. Then followed an order by one to "get the girl"—his daughter—Skidmore said, adding that he told the pair his wife and the child were in New York.

They had gone there, attaches of the sheriff's office reported, after Skidmore received a recent letter demanding $5,000, under threat of violence to the girl.

In the tussle, Skidmore said one of the men slashed at him with a knife, the blade tearing his shirt.

A short time after the attack, a bundle of blood-stained clothing, including a woman's slip, was found on a bridge about one and a half miles from this Butler county college town.

This led officers to believe that Skidmore—pursuing the pair with a gun he kept in the apartment—had wounded one or both of the men and that a woman might have been waiting for them in an automobile parked near the scene of the attack. They theorized that she used the slip in an effort to halt the flow of blood.

Officers recalled recent labor difficulties on the postoffice project, including the discharge by Skidmore of several laborers.

THE WHEAT FIELD

FOR more than a week the wind has blown over the wheat stubble. Ten days ago I saw the binder and three sturdy horses, with the driver seated at the rear, go through the field of waving, golden straw. The sheaves were thrown from the binder into the steel carrier just beneath. When four, or even more, were piled up here, the driver tripped it and thus at regular intervals were piled rows of gathered sheaves, from the fence row toward the center of the field.

Two men placed the well-tied bundles on end, close against each other, until the shock had reached the size of ten. Then two more "cap sheaves" were selected, and heads made broader and bent downward to fit the top of the accumulated heap. These were placed at right angles to each other, as "butters" to turn the water and keep the heads beneath clean and bright.

The earth below the stubble was green with thrifty young clover and in the moist hollows of the field, it grew well above the even line the cutterbar had made. The large wheels had pressed heavy paths six feet apart, round and round, until they reached the center.

It is a pleasing sight to look upon a field well shocked, and pleasanter to cross the fence and sit down by a favorite shock and smell the fragrance of the straw and ripened wheat; and then to strip the chaff from some seasoned heads, and rub the grain from its hull, and eat the rich, sweet morsels. The best chewing gum I ever tasted can't compare with the tempting cud this tasty wheat will make.

Wheat fields dotting the landscape, on hillsides and in valleys, are wealth and thrift, in money . . . but their beauty yields a richer harvest to every one who passes by.

Religion Solace to Mother

By VIRGINIA LEE

Have you ever felt bowed down with your numerous woes—everyday things that seem more than you can stand—and then met someone to whom some terrible tragedy has happened? That person's affliction made yours sink into insignificance, and before her courageous bearing of her grief your own wailings at the unkind cuts of fortune seemed utterly unworthy.

You who read this column regularly know how many letters I receive from wives who are troubled about their husband's behavior. They are among the most heartbreaking of the letters I receive. And they are hard to answer However, one woman who has been through a sad experience of the kind, writes to offer a comforting word to her sisters in distress

Religion has been the rock upon which A CHRISTIAN MOTHER was sustained through her tragedy. Her husband's firm promoted him a number of times and he was sent out "on the road," became a traveling man. He came into contact with many people of course, and fell in love with some woman. He obtained a Reno divorce, leaving his young wife with one little boy six years old and another one coming. Imagine the feelings of the wife! Don't you wonder how she ever lived through such a desertion? The older child now is eight and the baby 17 months

The mother writes: "They mean so much to me. The father never has seen the baby—his own flesh and blood.

"I think divorce today is the worst crime in our nation, and it causes many broken homes. These things we cannot understand, those of us who are passing through these trials, but I know that my plans are all in God's hand and so my future does not look dark because I have Him as my personal friend. There is nothing I can do but trust Him, who doeth all things well."

She also says that one should not seek revenge, but pity those who have wronged us.

I cannot help feeling that the future has something pretty fine for a person who has gone through so much and has been and is so brave about it.

* * *

"MY DEAR MISS LEE I am 21 years of age and in love with a girl of 16 of the same religion. We want to get married. My father does not object, but my mother does What would you advise me to do? BOB."

Wait until the girl is old enough to be married Bob No girl of 16 is What do the girl's parents say about it? Would they give their consent? Of course you are of age, and your mother cannot legally control your actions However, her feelings in the matter should be considered.

Beauty Sticks To Strict Routine

By JULIET SHELBY
Central Press Writer on Beauty

A few days ago this department went to a party given for Olivia de Havilland. We were lucky enough to corner her and get her to give us some of her secrets for keeping beautiful.

Olivia's recent trip to Europe to recuperate from an illness brought on by overwork was she laughingly confided, "less of a vacation than I had hoped for But in the picture business, people learn to rest harder, just as they work harder, in order to get the most out of every minute So I advise other girls who have really hard jobs to do the same sort of energy conserving that I do It's really a lot of fun and you will feel so much better all the time."

Though she still is very young in years, Olivia is wise and knows that her beauty is very important in the sort of work she is doing, and she also knows that good health is the foundation of all beauty. So plenty of rest good nourishing food and a few pleasant interests in life are "musts on her program.

No matter how many tempting invitations she receives when working in a picture, she never, never goes out during the week "My Sundays usually are spent swimming, lolling around and relaxing, or visiting close friends for a quiet afternoon"

The wild, fast night-life one imagines movie stars leading just isn't as far as Olivia de Havilland is concerned. You know how bad you look after a night spent out carousing till the wee hours of the morning. And since a star's popularity depends so much on her looks, she does all she can to keep them as fresh and sparkling as possible. So don't fool yourself and think that the beauty which makes a star your favorite can be squandered away through long hours spent as a cafe butterfly.

No Rich Desserts.

The charming young star confessed that after her work at the studio is over for the day she drives home and has an early dinner which usually consists of chops or steaks or beef with lots of vegetables. She dislikes rich desserts or sweets so milk and custards play a big part in her diet, especially now when she is still underweight. That's a good tip for you girls who feel a bit run down after a long hard year's work, too

After her light but nourishing meal, Olivia either reads her script for the next day's shooting, or washes her hair, letting it dry naturally, or catches up on her reading.

Aside from the sensible life that Olivia leads she said she had few other beauty secrets

She remarked: "I believe that lots of soap and water, plenty of sun and fresh air and the most scrupulous cleanliness as regards your person, make the sort of girl that is 1938's ideal

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I explained as much of my dilemma to Mrs. Tiger as I could with a wariness for possible "listening in" on crossed wires, and she was, as always, attentive and prompt in planning.

"Of course, Jerry can go for wood tomorrow just as well as any other," she said. "Or he might go and get salt hay for the asparagus beds. Then the kids could play around the beach"

"They'de love that," I agreed "Whichever Jerry wants to do is all right."

"As long as he has Babe and Pete hitched to the wagon," she said with laughing understanding of Junior and Roderick.

"Exactly," I returned with an answering laugh. "Now, there's only one thing more. Can Jerry come over tomorrow morning about seven, and stay until the boys are ready to go with him?"

"At six, if you like," she returned.

"No, seven will do nicely," I said. "Then I shall be able to tell the boys as soon as they awake that Jerry and Babe and Pete are waiting for them."

Katherine Warns Her.

"Soft pedal!" Katherine warned from behind me as Mrs Tiger laughed and answered.

"He'll be there, on the dot"

"Thank you," I returned "And I must say goodby. Someone is calling me."

I murmured the last words and hung up the receiver at her prompt "Goodby," thankful that my neighbor is one of the rare women who hang up a telephone promptly without thinking of some last word to say.

Katherine put her finger to her lips, and I heard my mother-in-law's footsteps coming slowly down the stairs. I realized that Katherine must have heard her movements in her room above us, and warned me just in time

"Well! Where is everybody?" Dicky's mother asked querulously as she came into the room, and Katherine moved toward the door.

Katherine Leaves.

"I'll just go back up to Faith," she said with a surreptitious wink at me, and Mother Graham gave a frosty little smile of approval. My mother-in-law's idea of proper care of Faith is to have Katherine sitting constantly in the room adjoining the nursery, ready to jump at the slightest noise

"Very proper," my mother-in-law commented, and then repeated her question.

"Dicky is having a romp with the small boys outside," I said. "Hank is lying down, and Bill is packing."

I held my breath for the explosion, but I knew that I could no longer postpone giving her a modified version of the plan for the evening She would never forgive me if she found out in the morning that Dicky, Bill and Hank were gone, and the reason for their going

"Packing!" she exclaimed truculently. "What for? What's going on here? More secrets, I suppose, from which I am to be excluded."

"Nothing of the sort, Mother," I said resolutely "I was only waiting for you to come downstairs to tell you about it. This was as much a surprise to me as it is to you."

Madge Explains.

"Well! go on! What are you waiting for?" she exclaimed irascibly, but the "martyr complex" had vanished from her voice, for which I fervently thanked my particular little joss.

"It seems that Dicky hasn't been satisfied with Hank's general condition this summer," I began, and went rapidly on with a description of Hank's questionnaire from his uncle, including Dicky's decision to have Hank see a specialist, and Katherine's success in securing the services of the best one in the city. There I brought myself up with a round turn Purposely I had given no hint to my mother-in-law of our real reason for putting Hank under medical observation. But I knew her keen mind If I gave her the name of the eminent authority on neurotic complexes, she would suspect something in an instant.

"Whom did she get?" she asked, and with a wave of sympathy for Sapphira, I gave her the name of an eminent heart specialist.

"Oh!" she said, her fluttering hand going up to her mouth, "does Richard think Henry has heart trouble?"

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, July 13.

Some rather fair prospects, presaged to materialize on this day, may require the utmost tact and discretion, as well as watchfulness for intrigue, confusion or a possible sinister phase. Yet, business and work should prosper and speculation may bring fortunate results.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of much definite progress and prosperity, with finances increasing and speculation offering some prospect of gain. But there is need for alertness to a doubtful, confused or treacherous situation, which might be baneful or sinister

A child born on this day may be capable and ambitious, with the prospect of important projects and large profits, in which there might be the element of subtlety, diplomacy or stratagem best furthering its expansive ideas

GRADING THE PLAYERS

It is astonishing to note how accurately the players are rated on merit by some deals played at duplicate Each grade of play obtains exactly the result to which it is entitled, as to whether the contract is made or not Observing such developments, plus discussing them after the game, adds up to an element of interest which the rubber bridge player never encounters

(Dealer South East-West vulnerable)

In a four-table duplicate in which this deal arose, three tables played at 4-Hearts and one at 3-No Trumps.

At table A, playing at 4-Hearts, after the lead of the club Q, South won and cashed three high trumps then led to the spade A and took the diamond finesse, which lost to West As a result two spades and two diamonds were lost

At table B, the first four tricks were the same, but then the declarer led a low spade and allowed East to win. After a club return another spade was offered and ducked The club return was ruffed and the spade A cashed. The thirteenth spade provided a spot for the diamond loser. As a result the contract was made.

At table C, East switched to a diamond after winning the first spade trick and set the contract. Where 3-No Trumps was bid, the contract was made easily.

THEATER

DICK POWELL'S new picture, "Manhattan Cowboy" was released at about the same time his new baby made her appearance. Powell and Joan Blondell, who didn't want publicity on the event, were hounded to death even with the privacy of their Beverly Hills home before the baby arrived The sight-seeing bus drivers megaphoned the approaching event to open-mouthed tourists right in front of the house and on several occasions determined tourists made the bus wait while they ran into the grounds and peered into the windows. Miss Blondell thought she was seeing boogies and in sheer desperation Powell went to the 'guides to movie stars' houses" and begged them to lay off until after the baby arrived Powell was pretty indignant about the whole thing, but had to control his feelings for fear of being called "high hat."

Oberon in Comedy.

While exotically beautiful Merle Oberon was in England she made several pictures for Alexander Korda, greatest of European directors, and one of them, "The Divorce of Lady X" will be shown at the Madison Wednesday and Thursday Laurence Oliver and Binnie Barnes are the only other players in the picture that are well known to American fans Miss Oberon was first introduced to American film audiences by Korda, in his "Private Life of Henry VIII" in which she played the tragic Anne Boleyn. "The Divorce of Lady X" is a gay, rollicking comedy of a party of masqueraders who are forced to spend the night in a London hotel because of the fog Miss Oberon not only manages to find a comfortable room for herself, but steals the pajamas, the bed, the book and the breakfast of a serious-minded young jurist.

On How To Dunk.

While "Having Wonderful Time" doesn't provide either Ginger Rogers or Douglas Fairbanks, jr. with particularly good roles and can't compare with her last comedy, "Vivacious Lady," it provides some hot weather entertainment One of the funnier spots is Red Skelton, Mansfield man who has made a reputation in vaudeville, doing his well known dunking act. He shows how different people dunk their doughnuts. He shows, too, how different people walk up and come down stairs, a far more difficult feat than any who roars at it can realize Skelton has learned the art of taking hard falls without breaking his face or his neck. The picture runs through Wednesday at the Ohio.

Three of A Kind.

Probably few movie goers remember it, but "Now and Forever" was one of the few pictures in which Shirley Temple played and was not starred, because her stardom came so quickly after her first picture. She is the clever child in this, who reclaims a confidence man and reunites him with the lady of his heart. Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard were the stars of this, which is now being re-issued and shown at the Majestic the middle of the week. Another interesting film of several years ago is "Mississippi," in which Bing Crosby croons some telling love songs to a haughty lady of the South, but ends up singing them to her younger sister. W. C. Fields, Joan Bennett and Gail Patrick are importantly cast.

Screen and Radio Stars.

"Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," which borrows its title from the well known radio program, but has no other connection with it, is the Ritz offering for three days starting today. It is a mixed-up comedy whose greatest attraction is a cast of radio and screen favorites. Phil Regan not only furnishes the romance with Ann Dvorak, but sings, while any kind of orchestra music you want will befound with Ted Lewis and Cab Calloway furnishing it. Kay Thompson brings her radio choir to the screen for the film. The screen stars include Leo Carrillo, Tamara, James Gleason, Luis Alberni, Gene Autry and Henry Armetta. A romantic comedy of the "dizzy" type is "Nothing Sacred," with Fredric March and Carole Lombard, which is the second Ritz offering.

COMPARES U. S. AND ENGLISH HOUSING PLANS

British Builder Notes Wide Differences in Standards for Low-Cost Homes.

The type of low-cost housing so popular in England would be difficult to market in America according to Frank Taylor, noted English builder, who outlines the main differences in English and American housing in an article in the Insured Mortgage portfolio, official Federal Housing Administration publication.

A builder of long experience in England, Mr. Taylor is currently developing a low-cost-home project on Long Island, N. Y., and his comparisons of English and American homes should be valuable in determining the extent to which America might borrow from the experience of the English in the construction of homes for average Americans.

Standards Differ.

"It is the difference between the viewpoints and standards of living of the two peoples," he said. "which is chiefly responsible for the dissimilarities between the American homes we are building and those we construct for our average home purchaser. The average American and the average Englishman both demand good construction. Other demands however, are so wide of each other that we have made no attempt to adapt our English ideas to our American operations. The type of American home which we are building is an attached six-room house of solid brick construction with central heating, hardwood floors, tiled bath, and all the other conveniences which the average American home purchaser demands. These homes are selling at $5,590.

"Our typical English offering is a semi-detached six-room house placed on a lot 22 feet wide and from 100 to 150 feet deep. Construction is of brick—we build no frame houses in England—with 11-inch-cavity walls; that is, double walls with air space for insulation. The roof is of concrete tile. The house has neither attic nor basement, and the footings go down only about 2 feet, since we have no frost-line worries. There is no central heating plant. The ground-floor living room measures 12 feet by 10 feet, with a dining room 10 feet by 10 feet and a kitchen 6 feet by 7 feet. The kitchen equipment includes a sink deep enough for some laundering—there are no laundry tubs—a water boiler, gas stove, and small cabinet. Refrigerators of any kind are seldom used Upstairs there are two bedrooms, a nursery, and a small bath. The bath contains a tub and a water boiler and a linen cupboard. The flooring is of the same materials as flooring in the other rooms.

Completely Modern Kitchen

It may be hard to realize after more than 5 years of viewing streamlined kitchens but the room shown in the upper picture was once described as a 'modern kitchen.' The room had plenty of light and ventilation, a modern four-burner gas range, generous-sized sink and a good cabinet. Of course it had not been planned to minimize the effort of preparing meals and washing dishes and there was no storage space to speak of but it was typical of the times The lower picture shows the kitchen after a complete modernization. The equipment has been rearranged, mechanical refrigeration installed, sink with under cabinets and large work top substituted for the unhandy old one. Venetian blinds, new floor covering and a large modern built-in cabinet has replaced the old one.

Clay Brick Offer Home Building Range of Colors

Original brick used in building Colonial homes in Virginia and New England was first imported as ballast from England and then later made in the colonies from native clay. Existing houses of the pre-Revolutionary period show there was little color range. The prevailing tints being pinkish-red, deep red, and red with purplish tone.

Today when contemplating building a brick house the home owner can obtain almost any color or finish. A house can have an exterior of face brick, or glazed brick, or tile, all of which are clay products of the brick family. The type determined upon is a matter of selection, as all have approximately the same durability.

For restoration projects and reproduction hand-made brick is usually employed. This material usually costs slightly more than the machine-processed brick.

An existing house can be completely altered in appearance by venering with brick.

NEW INSULATING BOARDS COME IN PLEASING PASTEL COLORS

Time was when most building materials that had as a primary duty some structural chore had no concern with beauty. The modern trend is to incorporate beauty in everything if possible. So today lighting fixtures, bathroom equipment, and kitchens all are planned with an eye for appearance and effect as well as utility.

One of the most recent building products to make a bid for beauty is insulation. Formerly the boards were plain in color, or rather neutral, and usually had to be given an application of paint or paper when surfaces were exposed in the interior of rooms

New finishes come in a wide variety of colors that can be made to blend with almost any scheme of decoration, while at the same time serving their original purpose of providing insulation The following tints are standard and may be obtained at most material dealers: Ivory, sky blue, apricot, apple green, and shell pink.
